GIRL HELD AS MASKED BANDIT

ARRESTED FOR LYNN HOLDUP

Rachel Frank, State Ward, Also Charged With Carrying Loaded Gun

Detectives visited a Washington street lodging house in Lynn today and arrested Rachel Frank, eighteen years old, and charged her with being the "armed woman, masked bandit" who bound, gagged and robbed Mrs. Vincenzio Morena last Saturday in her home at No. 88 Shepard Street, Lynn.

At police headquarters she was confronted by Mrs. Morena and identified, police say, as the girl who "slipped in like a shadow" and at the point of a gun engineered the sensational robbery.

In addition to a charge of robbery the girl was charged with having a loaded revolver in her possession.

She was arraigned before Judge Ralph W. Reeve in Lynn Court.

News of the arrest brought a crowd to the courtroom to view the piquant girl styled by police as the "armed shadow."

Smiling demurely she faced the crowd indifferently.

The robbery which created a sensation because of its unusual details resulted in only $24 being taken from Mrs. Morena. The armed bandit appeared almost as a stylishly-clad ghost seeming to appear from nowhere.

Mrs. Morena was with her sister in the kitchen of her home when suddenly there reached her the crisp command to "Throw up your hands." Startled she fell back, looked into the muzzle of a small revolver held in the hands of a slender girl.

"Into the bedroom," commanded the girl to the sister.

The woman obeyed and the girl then locked the door.

"It's a good thing you didn't cry out," said the girl facing Mrs. Morena and waving the gun threateningly, "or I'd have to blow off your head."

She was masked with a black silk handkerchief and the collar of a stylish fur coat turned up about her chin.

"Sit down," she commanded the woman.

Mrs. Morena sank into a kitchen chair.

There she was quickly bound and gagged and the girl then made a leisurely search of the house, taking only money, after which she slipped out in the same quiet way she had entered.

Today she was identified as a former $ ate ward who had been taken into th chome of Benjamin Stone, bakery proprietor, four years ago. She stayed there but a short time, police say, when she vanished, as did several articles of value from the house.

Her arrest today came through a top from Stone. Detectives working under a police inspector swept down on the Washington street boarding house and with drawn guns confronted the girl.

Miss Frank said that her home was at Brockton. She gave no address. Police officials said that they had established that she lived in that city for a time.

25,000 IN BRITAIN GO ON STRIKE TOMORROW

Liverpool, March 27 (By the Associated Press).—Twenty-five thousand men in the engineering and shipbuilding trades here have decided to go on strike tomorrow as a result of a sudden announcement by the employers putting national wage reductions into force. The Newcastle and Southampton unions have voted to take similar action.

HOUSE OF LORDS PASSES IRISH FREE STATE BILL

London, March 27 (By International News Service).—The Irish Free State act passed the House of Lords today on third and final reading. It now goes to the House of Commons for action on the Carson amendment, which provides that decision of the Ulster Boundary Commission may be appealed to the House of Lords.

TO FIGHT HOLLIS DIVORCE

Wife Prepares to Contest Decree Granted Ex-Senator in Bulgaria

The international divorce tangle of former Senator Henry French Hollis of New Hampshire became more involved than ever today.

Following the news that the former senator had obtained a divorce in Bulgaria, Mrs. Grace B. Hollis, his first wife, and her attorneys began an investigation of all facts in the case to see if there is not some phase of international law under which she can fight the decree.

In the first place, it was stated, Senator Hollis must be able to prove that he had an actual, bona fide residence in Bulgaria at the time the divorce was granted.

Secondly, a careful study will be made of the New Jersey laws to ascertain whether or not the circumstances under which the divorce was obtained are such as can legally be recognized by the New Jersey courts.

Mrs. Hollis at present is a resident of Princeton, N. J.

MAY SEE LOOPHOLE.

According to dispatches from overseas, Senator Hollis complied fully with the Bulgarian laws in regard to publication of notice to the defendant party in lawsuits there.

But, it is stated that in case the Bulgarian laws on that subject are not such as the New Jersey courts can recognize, Mrs. Hollis will have a loophole through which she can reopen the case.

Meanwhile, Attorney Edward Thomas Moore of New York, a legal associate of Senator Hollis, asserts that the divorce decree as granted by the Bulgarian courts is entirely legal, and intimates that Senator Hollis is now released from the necessity of making any further contributions towards his first wife's support, as was ordered by the New Hampshire courts in 1915.

SHIFT TO SOFIA.

He further states that, should Mrs. Hollis seek to contest the decree, she can do so only in the Bulgarian courts.

If she should bring an action in New Jersey courts, on the ground that the decree had been illegally obtained, he said, Senator Hollis could argue that the only possible illegality would consist in failure to comply with the Bulgarian laws and regulations as to residence, publication of notice, and the like.

Jurisdiction in such an action, he said, would lie with the Bulgarian courts and not with those of New Jersey, and Mrs Hollis would hence be obliged to argue her case in Sofia.

On the other hand, however, it is asserted that the New Jersey courts can refuse to recognize the extra-territorial jurisdiction of the Bulgarian divorce courts, provided that their requirements as to publication of notice, etc., do not accord with those of New Jersey.

AIDED BY COLLEAGUES.

It must also be proven, it is added, that Senator Hollis was a bona fide resident of Bulgaria when the decree was issued.

Before Senator Hollis could get married in Rome, it developed today, it was necessary for him to produce affidavits from four American citizens and four Italian citizens stating that he was in a position to remarry.

Among the Americans who signed such affidavits for him were former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois and Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma.

Compulsory Voting Bill Is Reported by Committee

The legislative Committee on Election Laws today reported the bill for compulsory voting, which would impose a fine of $5 on all able-bodied citizens who fail to cast their ballots on election days.

The bill provides that all registered voters must vote unless they are out of the city or town in which they live when election day occurs, or unless they can produce a physician's certificate that it would be impossible or extremely dangerous, because of their physical or mental condition, for them to go to the polls.

MAYOR URGES FENWAY, ARBORWAY SIDEWALKS

Mayor Curley is endeavoring to get an appropriation of $75,000 from the Parkman fund in order that granolithic walks may be built through the Fenway and Arborway. He says there is a bridle path through these parkways, but no place where pedestrians may walk with comfort. The Mayor has asked Arthur A. Shurtleff, to draw plans for a line hedge from the Fenway at Westland avenue to Franklin Park, the plans to include a bridle path through the line lane.

PRICE OF PIE CUT IN ONE RESTAURANT

District Attorney O'Brien's grand jury investigation of food prices in a group of Boston restaurants was resumed today, with Frank Forsythe of the Walton Company the first witness. Courthouse attaches today said a menu card of one of the restaurants which are being investigated showed a five-cent drop in the price of pie since the beginning of the inquiry.

PONZI WILL BE TRIED AGAIN

U. S. Supreme Court Rules He Must Face Trial by State

Washington, March 27.—Charles Ponzi, the Boston "get-rich-quick" financier, must stand trial under Massachusetts larceny laws by decision of the Supreme Court of the United States today.

The decision was handed down by Chief Justice Taft. Ponzi was convicted under Federal statutes and sought to avoid trial under the State laws.

The ambition of Massachusetts authorities to get hold of Ponzi for punishment under State law, and the desire of Ponzi to escape the State punishment, were brought before the United States Supreme Court in the appealed case of Charles Ponzi against Judge Franklin G. Fessenden.

Ponzi was convicted in 1920 for violating a Federal statute and sentenced to five years in the House of Correction at Plymouth, Mass.

Under the Massachusetts laws, 22 indictments have been returned against Ponzi. Six others are joined with him in the State indictments: Louis R. Cassullo, John S. Dondero, John A. Dondero, Harry Mahoney, Rinaldo Boselli and Henry B. Lielson.

Judge Fessenden held that all the accused should be tried together. Ponzi resisted being taken from the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States and contended the State courts have no jurisdiction over him.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, to which the matter went, asked the Supreme Court:

"May a prisoner, with the consent of the Attorney-General, while serving a sentence imposed by a District Court of the United States, be lawfully taken by process issued by a State court for trial on another charge?"

ROBBERS CRACK TWO SAFES; GET $700 IN ONE

Professional safe-crackers in Boston over the week-end rifled one Boston safe of $700 in cash, visited several offices looking for more and were scared off after almost opening a theatre office safe, missing $1,000 that lay within.

Today detectives with a clew secured through fingerprint evidence were combing Boston for the yeggmen they term "professionals."

The safe of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in a branch office at No. 854 Boadway, South Boston, was ripped open with a "can opener" and its inner compartment door blown off with nitroglycerine. Seven hundred dollars in cash was taken.

In the office of the Exeter Street Theatre the job of prying off the door, also with a "can opener," police believe, was well under way when the safe crackers were frightened away. A trifle more than $1,000 lay within.

From finger print evidence secured and the marks on both the insurance and theatre safes, police believe the same men superintended both jobs.

At the insurance company's office a one-ton safe was moved fifteen feet from a window and its inner compartment blown. Rugs were used to muffle the explosion.

Other offices on the same floor with the insurance company's office were visited but nothing taken. They included rooms occupied by Brigadier-General John H. Dunn, street commissioner of Boston, and Dr. Stephen F. Hardy, a dentist.

"Discovery of the visit to the theatre office was made by Mrs. Hattie M. Ayer, owner.

HUNDREDS OF WOMEN JOIN IN MARCH

Leaders Declare First Day's Walkout Most Successful in Mill City's History

Lawrence, March 27.—Ten thousand mill workers went on strike here today against wage reductions, according to the statements by the strike leaders.

They declared this the most successful first day of any strike in the history of industrial disputes in Lawrence.

George Doyen, watchman at the Lower Pacific Mills, reported the finding of nine discharged pistol bullets on the ground outside the mill gate.

Seven plants were most seriously affected when part of their working force stayed out.

POLICE SCATTER STRIKERS.

Pickets were very active during the noon hour and they reported they had induced several hundred additional workers to join the strike.

Police dispersed several thousand strikers who gathered outside the Pacific Mills, where strike leaders said about 300 more joined the strike after the plant opened.

The strikers moved off peaceably, led by a group of girls, and began a march past other mills, cheering

Today's strike was in protest of the 20 per cent. wage reduction, and the crafts involved included loomfixers, wool sorters, dyers and finishers, weavers, mule spinners and machinists.

Counsel Ridicules Her Claim She Is Too Ill to Be Witness

MRS. PHILIP LYDIG

WRIT TO FORCE MRS. LYDIG TO TESTIFY

Cohalan Will Issue Papers If She Does Not Appear in Reasonable Time

New York, March 27.—Supreme Court Justice Cohalan today threatened to issue a body attachment for Mrs. Philip Lydig, former wife of W. E. D. Stokes, unless she appeared within a reasonable time to testify further in Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes' divorce suit to recover dower rights she claims the elderly hotel man tricked her into signing away.

Mrs. Lydig, who already has testified in the case, was summonsed by Stokes' counsel for further cross-examination. Instead of appearing, she sent a physician's statement that she was too ill to testify.

Stokes' counsel ridiculed the certificate, but Justice Cohalan cut him short with the statement that "the usual process to compel her attendance" would be taken unless she appeared within a reasonable time.

Mrs. Lydig, who divorced Stokes in England several years ago, recently announced her engagement to Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension.

LODGE MOVES TO UNTANGLE TREATY

Washington, March 27.—Senator Lodge proposed to the Senate today that when it ratifies the supplemental agreement taking the Japanese homeland out of the Four-Power Pacific Treaty, that it ratify at the same time the declaration respecting domestic issues and mandatory rights, which accompanied the pact.

Senator Lodge suggested that joint ratification of the two supplements of the treaty offered a solution of the tangle regarding the declaration, occasioned by the Senate's failure to act upon it when the treaty itself was ratified.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, at once raised the point that the declaration was no longer in the possession of the Senate because it was returned to the White House, when the official exposed copy of the Four-Power pact was sent back after ratification.

Lodge and Hitchcock got into another hot verbal exchange as the wrangle on the Lodge reading of the declaration was resumed. Hitchcock asserted that it was "the evident intention of the administration forces to use strong-arm methods to force over the Four-Power Treaty, no matter what doubts, misconstruing or inconsistencies might be attached to its ratification."

Hitchcock said President Harding, in submitting the armament conference pacts to the Senate, referred to them as "Seven in number," whereas Secretary Hughes had described them as six in presenting them to the President.

Hitchcock contended the declaration had not even been formally read to the Senate when the treaty was under consideration. Lodge walked over to the Senate reading clerk and asked him a question. The clerk nodded and Lodge, misquoting Senator Hitchcock, declared that the declaration had been read and that the Nebraska Senator was wrong.

Hitchcock's ire was further aroused when Senator Lenroot, Republican, of Wisconsin, another administration spokesman, also insisted that the declaration had been read. The exchange of words between Lodge and Hitchcock waxed so fast and furious that the Vice-President had to rap repeatedly for order.

TROOPS AID 'BREAKERS' HELD UP IN PONTIAC, R. I.

Providence, March 27.—Detachments of State militia on strike duty at Crompton were rushed to Pontiac today when strikers held up a truck load of strike-breakers from Providence who were on their way to the Pontiac bleachery of the B. B. & R. Knight Company.

After some difficulty the strike-breakers were able, with the aid of the troops, to enter the mill.

John Powers, a member of the national executive board of the United Textile Workers, announced today that a strike affecting the Stone Valley Mills will march to the State House Wednesday and Friday of this week and will be demonstrations in the Senate in favor of the 48-hour week.

PICKETS ON GUARD AT FITCHBURG PLANT

Fitchburg, March 27.—Pickets appeared today at the Kingham mills of the Parkhurst Manufacturing Company, where a strike has been declared in protest against a wage reduction. The company, which suspended operations when the strike was called, did not attempt to open its doors.

An organizer of the Amalgamated Textile Workers is expected here tomorrow to take charge of the strike.

ARRESTS TO FOLLOW WALTHAM BONFIRES

Chief of Police Johnson of Waltham today announced that he would prosecute any persons found setting brush fires or bonfires. This action followed a strenuous day for the fire department, which was kept busy answering thirteen still alarms and three bell fires. One brush fire in the Prospect Hill district held the entire department for four hours.

11 KILLED IN ULSTER; WAR ON BORDER

Belfast Terrorized by Bombs, Looting and Many Fires

By International News Service.

Belfast, March 27.—Eleven persons have been killed or have died of wounds in Ulster during the past thirty hours.

Republicans attacked the barracks in Donegal and a three-hour battle ensued. The attackers were driven off. Six of the attackers' men captured and several were wounded.

Terror reigned throughout the night with rifle and pistol volleys and bomb blasts in the streets. Some of the street battles between Sinn Feiners and Orangemen were so savage fury. Large forces fought fiercely in the central business district, shooting and throwing bombs. Many stores were set afire, and there was much looting.

SEARCH FOR ARMS.

A woman, owner of a confectionery store, was killed by a sniper Sunday night. Two persons died of wounds received in earlier fighting. Firing was continuous along the frontier.

Through the week-end soldiers and police carried on an unremitting search for arms. Homes of Catholics and Protestants alike were searched.

A bomb arsenal was discovered in a stable in the East End. A quantity of small arms and ammunition was found underground in the floor. Large stretches of the Ulster border are desolate and deserted. Farms have been burned and the owners have fled.

RAIDS ON BORDER.

Armed bands, said to be detachments from the Irish Republican army, are still making flying raids over the boundary. The chief objects of these raids seems to be to prevent the destruction of the remaining bridges in the Clones region, which would leave Ulster safe from invasion.

The Sinn Fein boycott was renewed along the Ulster frontier, following the passage of "boycott resolutions" at the Irish Republican army convention in Dublin, Sunday. Unionists have been ordered to leave the Ulster border. Sinn Feiners have ordered the Belfast telegraph office at Dundalk closed.

The Ulster cabinet has accepted on behalf of Premier Sir James Craig an invitation to go to London to a peace parley.

Michael Collins will leave Dublin for London tonight.

"We are ready to reach peaceful agreement with Sir James Craig," he said, "but Craig has not been meticulous in his attitude toward us. He obviously looks on agreements as scraps of paper. Unless he shows a disposition the London conference is doomed to failure."

Lloyd George To Confer With King On Ireland

By International News Service.

London, March 27. — Premier Lloyd George came back to London today to attempt to pacify Ireland and prevent civil war between Ulster Province and the Irish Free State.

It was expected that the Premier would confer with King George on both the Irish situation and plans for the Genoa Conference before taking any decisions.

Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill announced in the House of Commons that the Irish peace parley would open on Wednesday.

Michael Collins, in a speech at Waterford Sunday, denounced the De Valera campaign, saying:

"Ireland never witnessed a more sinister or a more cowardly campaign. The wreckers of the north east and the south have united, and it is an unholy brotherhood.

"I have been invited to meet Sir James Craig and Premier Lloyd George in London. The greatest argument that I shall be forced to face will be the contention of De Valera and the Craig supporters that Belfast would not dream of coming into the Free State while the present division prevails in the south."

Irish Army Elects Executive Board

By Universal Service.

Dublin, March 27.—The convention of the 222 Irish republican army delegates which was held despite the order to the contrary issued by Arthur Griffith, decided to reaffirm its allegiance to the Irish republic.

It was decided that the army will be maintained as the Irish republican army under an executive board of sixteen members which is to draft a constitution for submission to subsequent convention.

The convention also voted to enforce a drastic boycott against the six-county area comprising the North of Ireland.

In reprisal for the seizure of St. Mary's Hall in Belfast, forty Belfast shipyard workers, who had been ordered expelled from Dublin, seized Trinity Hall in Dublin and are still in possession.

It is understood today that a number of the most daring fighters of the recent war are forming a unit to be sent northward to fight the Orangemen on account of the Belfast shootings.

Reprisal Threats Made in County Louth

Belfast, March 27. (By the Associated Press).—A notice posted near the Town Hall in Dundalk, County Louth, a strong Sinn Fein centre, says:

"On and after March 29, for every Catholic man, woman, boy, girl or child murdered or maltreated, so also shall the same quantity of helpers of the systematic murder of our fellow Catholics meet the same fate."

PONZI TRIAL IN STATE COURT ORDERED

fully taken on a writ of habeas corpus into a State court in the custody of a master, and there put to trial, on indictments there pending against him?"

Will Go on Trial Before Summer

"As soon as it is convenient for this office, the trial of Charles Ponzi will be begun in the State court."

This statement was made public by Attorney-General A. Weston Allen today, following the U. S. Supreme Court's decision that Ponzi may be tried in the State courts here.

The Attorney-General added that although there is a great deal of work still pending in his office, she would see to it that the trial gets under way before the Summer recess of the Superior Court begins.

This means that Ponzi is practically certain to go to trial before the middle of June.

Ponzi is also named joint defendant with various other persons in twenty-six other indictments.

Of these indictments, which accuse him of offences similar to those alleged in the ones in which he is now defendant, the other defendants are as follows:

In three Ponzi is named with Louis H. Casullio; in six, with John S. Dondero; in three, with Harry Mahoney; in three, with Rinaldi Bosselli; in three, with Henry T. Neilson, and in two each, with John A. Badaracco, Peter Brisacco, Paul Bosselli and Louis Schaffer.

All of the indictments were returned some time ago in the Suffolk Superior Court.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS ADMIT THEFTS

Three students of the Winthrop High School were called from their classes today to the Winthrop police station, where they were grilled by Chief William A. McNeil in regard to thefts amounting to $500 from motor and sailboats tied up at Fairclough's shipyard at the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, Winthrop.

The students, according to Chief McNeil, admitted the breaks and were sent back to their classes. The police will ask for warrants tomorrow in the East Boston court for the arrest of the boys.

Early today Chief O'Neil and Patrolmen James S. Turner went to a house on Marshall street, Winthrop, where in the rafters of the attic they recovered some of the stolen property. A second visit to a house on Read street they found more of the property in the attic. The loot included coils of rope, spark plugs, batteries, a graphophone and other important parts of boats. These thefts have been going on for more than a year.

PENSION RIGHTS IN CIVIL SERVICE RESTORED

Washington, March 27.—President Harding today signed a bill restoring eighty thousand civil service employes their pension rights, which were endangered by a recent decision of the Attorney-General.

Failure to Heat House Costs Brooklyn Landlord $2,500

New York, March 27.—For the first time in American history a verdict for damages based on the failure of a landlord to supply his tenants with heat was rendered here today.

James F. D. Cochenour was awarded $2,500 damages for the death of his son, William, four months old, by a jury in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn. The verdict was against George H. Jackson, owner of the apartment house in which Cochenour lived. Cochenour claimed that the absence of heat in the apartment last January resulted in the death of his son.

The case was based upon the recent New York State rent laws, which make it mandatory for a landlord to furnish heat for his tenants.

Cochenour testified that when he investigated he found no coal in the cellar.

would enter into conference with the acting fire commissioner at once.

If Manning insists on retiring, the Mayor said, he would appoint William J. Casey, superintendent of printing, in his place.

In his statement Manning said that he had made certain changes in his business which necessitated his withdrawal.

"These changes necessitate my giving more attention to my personal affairs than I have been able to do," he said. "I have stayed at fire headquarters longer than I intended when I accepted the appointment as acting chief from former Mayor Peters."

Both Manning and Mayor Curley said that they have absolutely no knowledge of a story to the effect that there is to be a big shakeup in the fire department, and that two deputy chiefs have been retired to make room for others.

According to this report, the "shakeup" was to begin today. Two deputy chief were to be retired, two district chiefs promoted, as were two captains, two lieutenants and three privates. More than fifty other privates and officers were also to be transferred.

The deputy chiefs mentioned were: Henry A. Fox, commanding division 2; Walter M. McLean, commanding division 3; District Chiefs Edward J. Shallow, of District 4, and Allan J. MacDonald, of District 14, were mentioned as the men to be promoted.

Both deputy chiefs have splendid records in the department, Fox having been appointed in 1886 and McLean in 1888. Both men have served through all the grades.

The other men mentioned for promotion are: Captain John P. Murray and Captain Charles A. Donohoe, Lieutenants Louis C. Stickle and William B. Jennings, and Privates John Cook and Edward Chamberlain and Carl A. Bowers.

ARMY BUILDINGS TO STORE SEIZED DRINK

Washington, March 27.—Vast quantities of seized liquors stored by the government in rented warehouses throughout the country are to be transferred to army buildings as an economy measures.

26-UNIT GARAGE IN BRIGHTON OPPOSED

"To place a twenty-six-unit garage in this neighborhood would mean nothing more or less than a place where bootleggers can hire a room. They can't get a place in the public garages, but they can in private ones," said John H. Lee, opposing the granting of a permit to Mrs. Jane Chase Chandler for the erection of a garage at Bellvista road and Woodstock avenue, Brighton.

The case was based upon the recent New York State rent laws, which make it mandatory for a landlord to furnish heat for his tenants.

Cochenour testified that when he investigated he found no coal in the cellar.

The case was based upon the recent New York State rent laws, which make it mandatory for a landlord to furnish heat for his tenants.

Under questions by Attorney Malley, Mrs. Chandler said she was not a "straw woman," but that she owned the property of some 9,000 feet herself and that her husband had drawn the plans for the proposed buildings.

Isaac E. Simons, an attorney, representing the A. Lobel and Henry W. Longfellow estate, was opposed to the granting of a permit. He said he represented a $500,000 investment and that his clients, both of whom died recently, took the place from a widowed lady and brought it up to its present high standard.

Lee represented John Kingston, a property owner, who has lived in that section for sixty years. Lee stated that it was a shame that Mr. Kingston should be disturbed in his old age.

WIFE'S WALLOP SAVES HIM A JAIL TERM

A blow on the face administered by his wife saved Morris S. Holzwenger of West Roxbury from a jail term today, when he appeared before Judge Lummus in Superior Criminal Court, charged with failure to provide for the athletic lady and their four children.

Judge Lummus also continued for three months a charge that Holzwenger had been found with liquor illegally in his possession.

Just before court opened Holzwenger and his wife met in the hall of the Courthouse. A dispute began which terminated only after the wife had walloped Holzwenger on the jaw with sufficient force to leave a red swelling.

When frowns came to the attention of the probation officers, who questioned the husband and were told by him that such little marital amenities were matters of custom in the Holzwenger home.

From the probation officers the news of the muscular ability of Mrs. Holzwenger travelled through the court. When the case came up for decision Judge Lummus smiled grimly and refused to send Holzwenger to jail as requested by Mrs. Holzwenger.

INSANE WOMAN IN TREE; TAKEN DOWN BY ROPE

Perches Over Ravine, Baffles Rescue Party From Asylum for Twenty Hours

By International News Service.

Washington, March 27.—Perched in a tree overlooking a ravine, where a fall meant a drop of fifty feet, and perhaps death, a woman inmate of St. Elizabeth's Insane Asylum kept the institution, the Washington police department and a number of volunteers in a fever of excitement for twenty hours. Then she was rescued.

Anna was hauled out of the tree by means of a rope about her ankles. Carpenters constructed a scaffolding beneath the tree, and on this raised a forty-foot extension ladder. A guard climbed up the ladder with fifty feet of rope.

After considerable manoeuvring, during which Anna almost kicked his teeth out, he got the rope around one of her ankles and looped it around a limb so she could not jump or fall. Then he slipped the rope around her other ankle.

The guard hauled her down, kicking and scratching, until he could get his arms around her, and thus the descent was made.

The woman roosted on the perch all night, clad only in a night gown, and defied those on the ground to get her. She threatened to jump every time anybody made a move to climb up the tree.

The woman is Mrs. Anna Lynoboraplas, twenty-seven years old, wife of a Polish laborer, who has been a patient at the institution for a year, following birth of a child.

Throughout the night her screams and singing kept the other inmates of the government asylum in a turmoil. When dawn came she was still perched on a swaying limb, waiting for last efforts of the police officers.

Because of the character of the ravine, firemen were unable to spread their life net.

Anna remained deaf to every entreaty to come down. She said she liked it up there and was going to stay.

"Anna, come down," pleaded the superintendent. "No," said Anna "not unless I get some ice cream."

The ice cream was brought, but by the time it arrived Anna had decided she didn't want it.

"I'll come down if you'll get my husband," said Anna then.

The husband was summoned, but he was so long arriving that Anna changed her mind again and demanded her baby.

The baby was brought to the base of the tree.

"That's not my baby," she screamed, examining a little bigger. "You can't fool me."

SHOWERS TOMORROW, THEN COLDER, PREDICTED

It isn't time yet to pack your overcoats away for the Summer, according to the weather man. He says unless it gets warmer, it will cool east to south winds, today and tomorrow. Wednesday will be colder. Extremely cold weather prevails today in the Canadian North west, the thermometer at Prince Albert registering 28 below. The lowest temperature in New England today is 36 degrees at Greenfield, Mass., Burlington, Vt., and Northfield, Vt. The warmest place in New England is New Haven, with a temperature of 50 degrees.

ANOTHER ONSET FIRE FIREBUG IS SUSPECTED

Onset, March 27.—Another of the series of fires in the Summer cole ony here, which Chief of Police Eldridge believes are incendiary, was discovered today, when word came of the destruction of the Summer home of W. W. McLaughlin of Boston. The house, on Point Independence, was destroyed, with a loss of $4,000. A fire Friday night destroyed four cottages, and the police chief has asked the State fire police to investigate, declaring that he believes the fires were started by a firebug.

RICH BOSTON CLUBMAN SHOWERED GIFTS ON PAULINE CLARK

LARSEN HIS RIVAL IN LOVE

Paid Bills and Gave Her Presents Until Student Came Between Them

Further details in the career of Pauline Virginia Clark were revealed today, when it was learned that the young woman's expenses had been paid by a wealthy member of the Tennis and Racquet Club.

It was further learned that this man ended his associations with the girl when he discovered her with Otto Hadley Larsen, Norwegian student at Technology, who killed himself after the "college widow's" death.

The clubman in question is well known in Boston and New York, being hailed in both cities as a free spender and a patron of beautiful young women.

He makes his home at the Tennis and Racquet Club, it is said, and leads a life of leisure on an income from an industry in which his family are big stockholders.

SHOWERED HER WITH GIFTS.

The clubman's romance with the dead divorcee began some time ago.

At that time Miss Clark was quite young; and her girlish beauty and spontaniety made an instant and deep impression on the blase man of the world.

Their acquaintance, made at a social gathering, ripened into warm affection on the part of the clubman, who shortly afterward made plans to assist her to a better position in life.

Immediately thereafter the dainty Pauline was installed in the luxurious Newbury street apartment, where she received a monthly allowance of $120 and was showered with costly gifts by her benefactor. Beautiful furs, jewels, an expensive motor car, gowns of all kinds, and the finest of silk lingerie were among the tokens of affection that the young woman.

She was the clubman's guest at dinner parties, theatres and other affairs, and became the envy of many women. Despite his attentions, however, Miss Clark's affections were not ensnared by her admirer. The old adage "Youth will be served," once more proved true in her case.

TURNED TO COLLEGIANS.

In the absence of the clubman, Miss Clark sought entertainment from college collegians, and was frequently seen with one or more in the big car which her benefactor had given her.

As time passed the parties she gave in her apartments were a constant source of discussion among the favored few who attended.

At length Miss Clark made the acquaintance of Otto Larsen, the Norwegian student at Technology, a dabbler in the sciences, whose theories seemed to fascinate the girl.

They were together almost constantly, so much so that their friends were amazed. The wealthy benefactor apparently was forgotten by the girl as soon as he left the house. Her mind turned constantly to Larsen while their friends wondered when the crash would come. At length it did.

LARSEN CAUSES SCENE.

On a certain evening the young couple were together in the Newbury street apartment. The clubman was not expected to call that night. Unexpectedly he appeared, having let himself quietly in with a key which he carried.

There was a wild scene, at the end of which the clubman renounced the girl and left. The next day her automobile was taken away and her monthly allowance was cut off.

Pauline then threw herself even more feverishly into the pursuits which she craved, and, within a short time, made the acquaintance of Bayard Wharton, Harvard undergraduate, track man and member of a prominent Philadelphia family.

According to friends of the girl, she had announced her engagement to Wharton on the night when she ended her life.

As a result of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien's formal order for an inquest, it is expected that the mystery in the case will be cleared up and the question of whether or not the girl was a suicide or murder victim finally determined.

Inspector James J. Dennessy, homicide expert of the bureau of criminal investigation, is actively engaged questioning witnesses and hopes to be prepared if the date of the inquest is set for Thursday.

District Attorney O'Brien is still waiting for the report of Medical Examiner George B. Magrath.

SECOND WIFE OF TOO MUCH MARRIED MAN

JIM LARKIN TO REMAIN IN PRISON

Governor of New York Refuses to Pardon Irish Labor Leader

By the Associated Press.

Albany, March 27.—Governor Miller has denied the application for a pardon for Jim Larkin, Irish labor leader, convicted of criminal anarchy and serving a sentence at Clinton prison.

Larkin's attorney, Louis A. Healy, had told Governor Miller that if Larkin were set free he would return to Ireland, where, it was said, he had a large following and would be a potent force in uniting the Collins and De Valera factions.

BROOKLINE MAN SENTENCED FOR BIGAMY

He and Wife No. 2 Witnesses in Case of E. C. Cardinal, Murdered in Kingston

Walter E. Dudley of Brookline was today given suspended sentences in the Brookline Court, totalling twelve months, for a bigamous marriage with Ina May Cahoon in that town on October 30, 1921.

The sentences included ten months for the illegal marriage and two months for swearing to false statements when he applied for a marriage license. The cases were continued until September 27.

Dudley was hotel chef at the Kingston Inn, and Ina May Cahoon, wife No. 2, was a waitress at the same hotel at the time of the murder of Edward C. Cardinal last December. They both made statements to the police in that case.

During the hearing on the murder case, it developed that Dudley had married Miss Cahoon, and it was the publication of the fact that led wife No. 1 to bring the matter to the attention of the town clerk of Brookline and the authorities were notified.

Mrs. Leona Bradley, wife No. 1, declared that she had obtained a decree nisi from her husband in June and that it did not become absolute until the following December. Records showed that Dudley applied for a license to marry Miss Cahoon October 11, 1921, and that it was issued on October 26.

Both wives were in court when Dudley pleaded ignorance of the law.

BILLPOSTERS' CASE IS SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Washington, March 27 (By International News Service).—The supreme Court of the United States on motion by the government dismissed the government's case against the associated billposters and distributors of the United States and Canada. This was an anti-trust case prosecuted by the government as a conspiracy to restrain interstate and foreign commerce and trade in posters. The government and concerns have reached an amicable settlement.

1,800,000 POUNDS OF FISH TODAY'S RECEIPTS

A big fleet of fishing vessels brought 1,800,000 pounds of fresh fish to the South Boston fish pier today. Despite two big catches the dealers were able to dispose of most of it. Nearly 600,000 pounds of haddock arrived, selling at two to three cents a pound, about one and a half cents under Saturday's market.

HILL NAMED MASTER TO HEAR KEEFE PLEA

Attorney Arthur D. Hill, formerly corporation counsel for the city of Boston, was appointed special master today by Judge James M. Norton, Jr., of the Federal Court to hear Keefe Bros.' petition for the return of about $190,000 worth of high-grade liquors which United States Commissioner Hayes found to have been illegally seized from them.

BOODLE AND BEACH TESTIFY FOR RICKARD

Author and Society Man Both Defend Gambling as Honorable Profession

By International News Service.

New York, March 27.—A number of men more or less well known in their several walks in life were called as character witnesses today at the trial of "Tex" Rickard in the Supreme Court on grave charges made by little girls.

The first of these witnesses was Rex Beach, the writer, who said he had known Rickard for years.

He said he had met him in Alaska and had known him there for four years when both were engaged in gold mining. Rickard, he said, bore an excellent reputation as to veracity and morality. Cross-examined by Assistant District Attorney Pecora, he was told that Rickard had run a saloon and gambling house in Alaska and had done so mining.

"Do you regard gambling as an honorable profession?" Beach was asked.

"Well," he replied, "it might be—that depends on how it is conducted."

Charles G. Herron, proprietor of two newspapers, said he met Rickard in Nome, where his opponent, Pecora, ran a gambling house and saloon.

"Do you approve of gambling?" he was asked.

"I did then, but now I abhor professional gambling. However, Rickard's gambling house had a very high reputation."

Major A. J. Drexel-Biddle of Philadelphia, who said he was the leader of the Bible class movement, testified that Rickard bore a good reputation, and that he had known the fight promoter some time.

"Do you consider professional gambling an honorable occupation?" he was asked.

"Not now, but twenty-five years ago it could have been conducted honorably."

It was brought out that after the charges had been lodged against Rickard by the Children's Society, Biddle, then a socially prominent man both Philadelphia and New York, attempted to get in touch with some of the well-known men who are associated in the society, but for what purpose was not revealed.

Mrs. Rickard also took the stand to testify in the defence of her husband. She said he was at home on one of the dates mentioned by his accusers.

Mrs. Rickard was manifestly in ill health and showed signs of collapsing.

Her testimony dealt mainly with the whereabouts of her husband on November 12, the day set by the girl in her complaint.

Rickard, his wife said, arrived at their home at about 6:30 o'clock in the evening and was in her room when Dr. Hendricks called at the house to attend her. She had been ill throughout the day, she testified.

She remembered Attorney Rickard because of her illness on the day following it, she testified.

Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora asked one question of Mrs. Rickard, in cross-examination That was:

"Are you sure you were quite ill on November 12?"

"Yes," she replied.

REFUSED TO FREE CAT, NEWTON MAN ARRESTED

Peter Cassellia of Cherry street, West Newton, was arraigned in the Newton District Court today charged with cruelty to animals. Cassella, who is well to do and a leader of a certain element in West Newton, was arrested by Patrolman Lawrence Dungan, who heard a kitten mewing in the rear of his home. Investigation showed it had been imprisoned between the boards of a partition for two days. Cassella refused to have the boards ripped open to free the cat, and was arrested by him and called in a carpenter, who turned the trick and set pussy at liberty.

ASKS FARE REDUCTION ON NANTASKET BOATS

Representative Coleman E. Kelley of Dorchester today petitioned the Department of Public Utilities to compel a fare reduction on the Nantasket Beach steamboat line. Kelley said the company charges the maximum rate for trips on Sundays and holidays, although season tickets are sold at reduced rates to commuters. This, he said, constitutes a discrimination against the poor, who only have a chance to go to the beach on week-ends or holidays. A hearing has been set for April 7.

BAY STATE YOUTHS IN LIQUOR AUTO ARE HELD

Lewiston, Me., March 27.—Three youths in the limousine seized by the police here Saturday, charging illegal transportation alcohol, were held in $1,000 in the Municipal Court here today. They were: Rene H. Pelletier, Lynn, and Napolean Bourgeois and Emil Lapointe, Salem, Mass., Joseph Pelletier, an attorney of Salem, Mass., who was arrested at the same time will be given hearing later.

MOTOR BARGE ASHORE ON CHATHAM BEACH

The Coast Guard cutter Acushnet was rushed from the Charlestown Navy Yard today to the assistance of the motor barge Edith Nute, stranded with a crew of six men aboard on Chatham Beach. The Nute was pounded by a heavy surf. She ran ashore when her navigators mistook the beach lighthouse for the Chatham lightship. The vessel was bound light from Boston for Newport News.

'Crime Against Love to Be Fat,' Declares Woman Doctor

Less Food, Balanced Diet and Exercise Is Her Royal Road to Conjugal Felicity. Avers Fat People Are Not Lovable.

"It is a crime to be fat—a crime against love, against health, efficiency and society."

"But fat people are not to blame for their surplus at present. Yet in a year or two, because of the spreading of the knowledge of how to reduce, it will be a disgrace to be fat."

Such are the medical flats of Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, former chairman of the public health committee of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, at present a visitor to Boston.

The pronouncements of Dr. Peters carried added weight as she has been "through the mill" herself. For years she has exercised daily, eaten according to a balanced diet, and as a result of her experience in ridding herself and others of excess weight, will devote her time exclusively to the popularizing of scientific knowledge for the benefit of public health.

FAT PEOPLE NOT LOVABLE.

"It is a crime against love to be fat, because fat people are not lovable. To reduce in weight means to promote conjugal felicity," declares the doctor.

"To be fat, is a crime against health, because it is the source of innumerable ills, including cancer, muscular rheumatism, flat feet, heart disease and apoplexy.

"Fatness is a crime against efficiency and society, because it is a sign of over-eating. Today when hundreds of thousands of women and children are starving to death, many people in America are over-eating."

In support of her contention that many people are over-eating in America, Dr. Peters quotes the statistics of Secretary of Labor Davis, wherein it is shown that the average amount of food, daily consumed, by a soldier in the A. E. F. was about 1,540 calories, while the civilian's average today is 2,664 calories.

"If 1,540 calories of food per day were enough to support an athletic body in times of great demands upon mental and physical energy, it certainly shows that with people consuming 2,664 calories of food per day, over-eating is prevalent," declared Dr. Peters. "An American consumes about half a ton of food annually that he has no need for."

OBESITY UNNECESSARY.

"It is natural but not necessary for women to add weight as they grow older. People should realize that after reaching the age of maturity, which is about thirty years for both men and women, the body does not need food any longer for growth. It needs food only for upkeep and repair and energy.

"The remedy for this condition, and that of fat people in general, is to study their diets or to consult with their physician regarding their diet and to exercise daily. A normal person needs about 2,000 to 2,500 calories of food per day. If their diet shows a larger amount of calories than this it indicates over eating.

"Nor is this the only point to be remembered. In addition to the quantity of the diet it is exceedingly important that it should be of proper quality, a balanced diet in other words.

According to Dr. Peters a balanced diet should be one consisting of 10 to 15 per cent. proteins, providing for the repair and upkeep of the body; 15 to 30 per cent. fats, to supply heat to the body, and the balance in carbohydrates, starches and sugar, which furnish the energy.

To illustrate the lack of a balanced diet Dr. Peters quoted the copyrighted nut sundae. This contains far more than 2,000 calories of food—more than the amount of food calories necessary for an entire day. But it is all of one kind—fats. And if a person ate a nut sundae early in the day he would be famished in the evening if he ate nothing else, even though it has the sufficient amount of calories.

CONVICTED OF SELLING HYPODERMIC NEEDLES

Chester Field, a clerk in the surgical instrument store of C. H. Goldthwaite & Co. at No. 42 Cornhill street, was found guilty of selling a dozen hypodermic needles previously and ordered to pay $2,000 costs to Suffolk County in Superior Criminal Court today. He was then placed on probation. A few days ago Field was ordered to pay the same amount to the county and placed on probation for the same offence. Dr. George Washington Hill, recently indicted for selling hypodermic needles, pleaded not guilty before Judge Waite and was released in $5,000.

CLEARED ON CHARGE OF ASSAULTING OFFICER

Alvin E. Edmunds, twenty-three years old, of Princeton street, East Boston, was freed by a jury in the Superior Criminal Court today of the charge of assaulting Patrolman William J. Hart. The case came on Edmunds' appeal from the East Boston district court. According to witnesses, Edmunds did not assault the officer, but had been threatened by the officer for endeavoring to keep a man out of trouble who insisted on questioning the officer's right to arrest another man.

REV. ADELARD DELORME COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Montreal, March 27.—Rev. Adelard Delorme today was formally committed for trial on the charge of murdering his half-brother, Raoul, last January, by Judge Cusson in police court.

DR. LULU HUNT PETERS

Average American eats half a ton more than he or she needs in a year, says Dr. Peters. She says it will be a disgrace ere long to be fat.

KERN ON WAY TO HIS HOME IN ALLENTOWN

Bosch Magneto Purchaser Landed Saturday from Europa in Providence

By the Associated Press.

Allentown, Pa., March 27.—Martin E. Kern of Allentown, whose purchase of the Bosch Magneto Company from the alien property custodian caused government investigation, is expected here tomorrow night or Wednesday.

He arrived at Providence Saturday on the steamship Canada and is said to be in Washington. He is accompanied by his attorney, Lawrence H. Rupp, who met him when he landed in a government launch from the steamship.

As far as is known here there are no charges against Kern.

Inspector Admits Man Was Taken Off Ship.

Providence, March 27.—Immigration Inspector William Clark admitted today that a man was taken off the steamship Canada by Department of Justice agents from Washington last Saturday.

An attorney said to represent the interests of Martin E. Kern of Allentown, Pa., was in the party. Clark, however, refused to say whether he was taken into custody.

Thomas J. Callaghan, connected with a local detective agency, left for New York Saturday evening with a stranger who was taken from the Canada.

THREE KILLED IN TEXAS RAIL WRECK

Royse City, Tex., March 27.—Three men were killed and one seriously injured early today in a freight wreck here. The dead are: Elvin S. Hill, Dennison, Tex.; Roy Collett, Peoria, Ill.; Bruce Frazier, Peoria, Ill.

MOONSHINE IS BLAMED FOR MAN'S DEATH

Hyde Park Citizen Succumbs to Alcoholism in Home of Friend

An alleged moonshine party ended in death for Jeremiah T. Carroll, thirty-five years old, of Atherton street, Hyde Park.

He died in the home of Francis J. Galipeau on Brookville street, Hyde Park, where he had been drinking, according to the police, with Galipeau.

Dr. Morton L. Briggs of Hyde Park pronounced death due to alcoholism and a weak heart. He notified the medical examiner, who ordered the body removed to the Southern Mortuary.

2 MEN ACCUSED OF CARRYING MOONSHINE

Prohibition Agent Thomas McNulty was complainant today before United States Commissioner Hayes in Federal Court against Morris Fisher of Franklin avenue, Chelsea, and Barney Bartstein of Highland avenue, Revere, who were charged with unlawfully transporting seventy-eight gallons of moonshine whiskey in an automobile in Chelsea square last night. Both pleaded not guilty and furnished bail of $500 for a hearing next Monday.

FATHER GLAD WILLIAMS OUSTED EDITOR SON

Chicago, March 27.—George Olmstead, Jr., one of the Williams College students expelled for helping publish a snappy issue of a college paper, is at home in Evanston, but without the parental blessing. George Olmstead, Sr., conferred with his son and then said: "I am glad the faculty reprimanded the young men guilty of issuing such a paper. They wanted the world to know that such conduct will not be tolerated by Williams."

MOTHER KILLS 3 CHILDREN AND SELF

Butcher Knife Used by Connecticut Woman Driven Frantic by Domestic Trouble

Greenwich, Ct., March 27.—Finding of a blood-stained note appended to a package containing papers and bank books caused police to hurry early today to the apartments of Mrs. Henry Barker, thirty-one years old, where they found the bodies of the woman and her three children, all with their throats cut, lying on the floor.

The note, signed by Mrs. Barker, said she intended to kill her children, the oldest of whom was five, and then kill herself. It was lying outside the door of the house where it was seen by Leo Harp, a drug clerk, who turned it over to the police.

Mrs. Barker had used a butcher knife. Police think that she wrote the note after slaying the children and then went back into the room and dispatched herself.

The Barker family lived at No. 131 Railroad avenue, in a poorer section of the city, although the family was not considered to be in financial straits. Domestic trouble is believed to have caused Mrs. Barker to resort to the tragic deed. Her husband, it is said, left her six months ago and now is employed at Stamford.

There are five other families in the house, but none was aware of the tragedy until police entered the Barker lodgings. The children were Margaret and Johanna Barker and Henry, the latter two years old and the youngest eighteen months.

BOY, 12, MAKES THIRD DROWNING RESCUE

The hero of three drowning rescues during the past year, Paul Lerman twelve years old, of No. 10 Wall street, West End, is today heralded as West End's champion life saver.

Seven year-old Robert Cubilewich while playing with two other boys in the Charles River Basin grounds, sighted a golf ball floating shoreward at the river dam.

Robert decided to get it. Unnoticed, the little fellow crept cautiously down the steps leading into the water, slipped and submerged.

Paul, who was walking nearby, saw the struggle. Without hesitation, he reached a full arm's length and grasped Robert, who was going under for the second time, by the coat, pulling him ashore.

THREE BIG STILLS ARE SEIZED IN LYNN RAID

What the Lynn police declared is the biggest liquor haul in months was made today when Federal dry agents and the Lynn vice squad, under the command of Lieut. Edward Eagan, raided a house on Washington street, Lynn, and seized two 200-gallon stills, one 150-gallon still, several hundred gallons of mash and sixty-five gallons of moonshine whiskey. Tony Rettano was arrested, charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR VICTIMS OF SEAPLANE

Miami, Fla., March 27.—Airplane search for the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. August Butte and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith of Kansas City and Mrs. J. S. Dickson of Memphis, lost when the flying boat Miss Miami was wrecked at sea, has been discontinued. The sub-chaser Service, Captain Cesnar in command, went out today in the hope some trace of the victims of the tragedy might be found. The sole survivor, Robert Moore, the pilot, is recovering from his experiences.

Prosperity waits on the man who goes out and finds things to do. In short, who reads the "Help Wanted" columns of The American when he wants a job or a better job.

U. S. TO 'SCRAP' $3,500,000 IN CADETS

Naval Academy Boys, Trained for Service, to Be Lost to Nation's Defence

By WILLIAM HARD.

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, March 27.—I went went over to Annapolis, Md., to the United States Naval Academy to take a slant at the lads in the graduating class and see if they looked as if they were worth saving for the service of their country. I tried to smoke while watching baseball practice on the academy grounds. A guard stepped up and said: "No smoking on the grounds, sir." I stopped. Stern place, the naval academy.

The boys look it, too. We spend about $10,000 on each of these young gentlemen, giving him an education to fit him to serve us in the fleet. We now propose to junk about $3,500,000 worth of this education by letting out about 350 of this year's graduates without commissioning them.

At great expense we have fitted them to do a certain sort of thing for us. It is a thing that only they and their fellows who have had that same sort of education know how to do. We now, if the present sentiment of the House of Representatives continues to prevail, propose to take these lads with this thing in them and throw them and it away.

THEY'RE WELL TRAINED.

Till I saw row after row of them in a large auditorium, I did not realize how specialized they were. They are different from other boys—from civilians. It is not only their drill.

It is not only that special odd combination of great modesty of bearing and of complete firmness of intention which the navy both in Britain and in America seems specially to give to its young men. It is not only these familiar things. It is another thing too, which I had not really realized at all.

These young gentlemen have been specialized out of all regular civilian commercial prospects and ways of thought. It has been trained into them that for small pay they are giving themselves to a calling, a mission, a life in which their own life is not their own and in which the one end is the safety of their country's life. It can be seen on their faces. These faces are those as of young men who very cheerfully have taken vows and have retired from the world.

THE BOYS WHO FIGHT.

This is what we have done to them for four years at great expense and with great ingenuity. Admiral Mahan, the greatest American naval authority, and also the world's greatest naval authority in our age used to say: "Ships do not fight."

It is not the ships; it is the men. That carry the discipline and the doctrine that make the victory.

The doctrine necessary is that the lad shall leave his town, his family, and all that on land is his, and serve his country in a service that looks at it from the seas outside it. The doctrine is that nothing on land shall be important, and that only the protection of that land by watchings on ships and by fighting against ships and if necessary by sinkings in and with ships shall have value for him.

By FRIEDA DAVIS

SOME time someone from Hollywood—or even from Fort Lee, New Jersey—will follow the lead of Ernest Seton Thompson and write a book on "Wild Scenarists I Have Known." There is no real reason, of course, why a motion picture writer should be any queerer than other makers of the movies, but the fact remains that there is tremendous scope for character drawing in him. He seems to be, for the most part, the only character left out of "Merion of the Movies."

As a matter of fact, the only scenarists I have known have had no distinguishing earmarks. They might as well have been doing any other sort of work—or perhaps I should say indulging in any other form of art. Olga Printzlau, who is one of the shining lights of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department on the West coast, is young, extremely attractive and vivacious. She is constantly being taken by casual studio visitors for a leading lady, at least. She does, however, show her writer's mind when she talks. She catches themes and meanings in the smallest incidents, in happenings that pass by others as inconsequential.

Frances Marion, who combines directing with scenario writing, is much like Miss Printzlau, for she is young, attractive, and intensely human. There is nothing of the "highbrow" about either of them. Waldemar Young, responsible for many of the Thomas Meighan continuities, might very well be a broker or a coal merchant or—well, anything but a scenarist. But he happens to be a writer, that's all. And a very good one.

Therefore, I believe, scenario writers roaming about the studios exactly, or nearly exactly, like Vincent Leech, the brain-child of Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman, authors of the smash-ing "Dulcy" at the Hollis Street Theatre. He favors the post type of boaring, wearing long hair and clothes of a flowing cut, and posing somewhat a la John Barrymore. His own, as Willie Parker, who is Willie Baxter grown up, says, "makes love in subtitles."

"Yes," he remarks with lifted eyebrows, "the movies are still in their infancy. We want to do tremendous things! Oh, yes. We're going to do some of Shakespeare's things next. I'm working on one of his continuities now, and I was telling my director"—he pronounces it dir-rector—"yesterday, I said, 'You know Shakespeare has a tremendous feeling for plot.' Of course, the dialogue is stilted for modern audiences, but then you don't have to hear that in the picture. But he's still the master."

Dulcy announces, gazing raptly at Leach, "He's going to organize his own company."

"Who," demands Willie dryly, "Shakespeare?"

Whereat Leach is hurt to the core!

And I'm led to believe that he is not too grossly exaggerated.

ANOTHER MERGER.

THE Goldwyn-Associated First National combination is not the only new organization or reorganization to lift its head over the motion picture horizon, for there is soon to be no less a merger than that of Richard Rowland and Maxwell Karger, ex-president of Metro and ex-supervising director of the company, respectively.

These two, who have everything in their favor as a pair of producers, have been arranging for an independent concern since they severed connections with the Metro Company. They have secured financial backing to the extent of several millions, it is understood, and have Wall Street financiers behind them, body, soul and pocketbooks.

NEW STAR RISING.

ROBERT GORDON is the newest flimlite to advance to the position of stardom. He will stage his debut in a series of Ivor McFadden productions, the first to be "Stepsons of Light," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes.

Gordon will appear in six stories by this same author. In his first film he will be supported by Elinor Fair, Wharton James, Jack Connelly, Mantine Wright, Harry A. Smith, Roy Bassett and W. S. Weatherbee.

ARLISS LEAVING.

GEORGE ARLISS, who is figuring largely in Boston this week in "The Green Goddess" at the Plymouth Theatre and on the screen at the Boston Theatre in "The Ruling Passion," is the latest to announce a determination to sail for Europe.

He will leave in April for a few months' tour abroad, during which he may make a picture.

OSER COMING TO U. S. TO APPEAL FOR HEIRESS

Riding Master Reported to Have Had No 'Positive' News of His Love Suit

By International News Service.

Zurich, Switzerland, March 27.—Max Oser, forty-eight-year-old Swiss riding master, whose romance with Miss Mathilde McCormick of Chicago, sixteen-year-old granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, has stirred him world-wide attention, is going to the United States to make a personal appeal to the girl's parents for their daughter's hand in marriage, according to Oser's intimate friends today.

Oser says he is going to Lake Thoune to visit friends, but his intimates contend that he is merely attempting to throw the public off the track. Oser's statement, however, is supported by the fact that he has not yet requested a passport visa from the American consulate.

Immediately after he sold his stable of driving horses reports began to go around that the middle-aged lover was going to America the first of April to see his youthful sweetheart and her parents.

The stable was sold to Oser's friend, Colonel Haegler. Oser retained only two horses, one his own favorite, the other the favorite of Miss McCormick. Oser refused to allow his St. Bernard dog to be included in the sale.

Oser's personal belongings are packed and if he really intends to go to America to see Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, parents of Mathilde, he can start on quick notice.

Miss Mangold, housekeeper for Oser, said that the latter had not received any "positive" news from the United States regarding his love suit.

Miss Mangold was authority for the statement that the mother and sister of Max are opposing his proposed marriage, but that his father is strongly in favor of it.

STEAMERS CRASH OFF NEW BEDFORD HARBOR

New Bedford, March 27.—The steamers Gay Head and Mirimar, both of the New York, New Bedford & Vineyard and Nantucket Steamship Company, collided today off Mosher's Ledge in the outer harbor. The Mirimar, outward bound, tried to pass the inward-bound Gay Head to starboard, and through a miscalculation struck her a glancing blow on the bow. Only a few passengers were aboard the steamers, and there was no panic. Joseph Estep, a pipefitter on the Mirimar, received a badly crushed foot. The superstructure of each ship was somewhat damaged.

RUM SHIP SKIPPER FINED $2 A LOBSTER

Walter D. Sweeney of Yarmouth, N. S., whose schooner, the Grace & Ruby, was raided by government officials on mine outside of Salem, where a large quantity of liquor was confiscated, paid a $48 fine imposed by Municipal Judge Sullivan for having aboard the vessel twenty-four undersized lobsters. Deputy Fish and Game Warden Frederick W. Goodwin appeared for the prosecution.

FEARS PEOPLE WOULD LOSE MILLIONS

Charles H. Jones Opposes Plan to Shift Savings Bank Life Insurance Control

President Charles H. Jones of the Commonwealth Shoe & Leather Company today declared that any scheme to wreck or impair the efficiency of the State system of savings bank life insurance would cause a loss of millions of dollars to the poor people of Massachusetts.

With other prominent business men, he appeared before the Committee of State Administration to protest against the scheme of reorganization of the State departments that would remove the independence now enjoyed by Savings Bank Life Insurance Department by placing is completely under the control of State Insurance Commissioner Clarence W. Hobbs.

"Savings Bank Life Insurance was started in this State largely through the efforts of Justice Louis D. Brandeis after the New York expose of the private, old-line insurance companies," said Jones.

"This system has already resulted in providing cheaper insurance for the poor people and it has forced the old-line companies to reduce their premium rates. Millions have been saved to the poor, and if Savings Bank Life Insurance continues to be managed independently it will be impossible for the old-line companies ever to raise their rates again."

"This is socialization of the insurance business," said Representative Pinkham of Lynn, a committee member. "How would you like to have your shoe business socialized?"

"I'd be delighted, if socialization would mean better shoes for the people for less money," replied Mr. Jones.

George L. Barnes said the old-line insurance companies used sixty-six cents for their own expenses out of every dollar paid in premiums by the insured. The old-line companies now retain thirty cents for expenses, he said, and the Savings Bank Life Insurance takes only 6.51 cents out of the dollar paid in by the insured.

There are now 82,000 people in Massachusetts insured under this system, said Barnes, and there is $18,000,000 of insurance in force.

Bernard J. Rothwell of Boston said the duty of the Insurance Commissioner is to supervise the private companies. If he had charge of both the private companies and the State system, there would be complaints from both sides, he said.

NEW ATTEMPT TO AVERT COAL MINE STRIKE

Labor Representatives Charge Operators Are Making Excessive Profit

New York, March 27 (by the Associated Press).—Labor members of the anthracite arbitration committee returned from Cleveland today, to resume negotiations with the operators in an effort to reach a wage agreement that would avert the strike of 600,000 organized miners called for next Saturday night.

Operators and miners expressed a desire to confine future sessions to consideration of the nineteen demands of the workers.

The miners' committee will go into the conference armed with statistical data to bolster their claims that the coal digger is entitled to a 20 per cent. increase in wages. They propose to demonstrate that wages in the mines failed to keep pace with wages in other industries during the war; that the mine operator is making an excessive profit by underpaying his labor and overcharging the consumer.

Although they have declined, thus far, to directly discuss their proposals, the operators made clear at the opening of the conferences that they would not entertain a wage increase.

MALDEN HOUSE RANSACKED BY THIEVES

$2,000 in Gems Stolen While Family of Max Goldberg Is Motoring

The Malden police are looking for burglars who entered the home of Max Goldberg, No. 43 Bryant street, ransacked the house from top to bottom and got away with a diamond ring and other jewelry valued at $2,000. The burglars left no clew.

According to Goldberg the thieves entered his home while the family were motoring. They forced the cellar and kitchen doors, both of which were locked.

When Goldberg found evidence that burglars had been in his home he investigated and discovered that the thieves left a sack in which they had placed fur coats belonging to himself and his wife, as well as some silk lingerie.

Continuing his investigation, he discovered that the burglars had overlooked other jewelry valued at about $2,000, and which he had hidden. Bureau drawers in rooms in the upper part of the house had been broken open and the contents strewn about the floors.

The stolen property consisted of a platinum ring set with fifteen diamonds, valued at $1,800; a gold watch, bracelets and several small rings. All the jewelry stolen was insured.

A strip cut from an O'Sullivan Safety Cushion Heel stretches and springs back like an elastic band

Modern life makes this spring essential

EVERY year hard floors and pavements become more universal. Every year the necessity for a heel that will absorb the strain of standing and walking becomes more important.

Of course, hard leather heels give no relief. Ordinary rubber heels are either too soft for wear, or too hard for springiness. O'Sullivan's Safety Cushion Heels combine just the right toughness for long, hard service with springiness that gives real protection.

The price of O'Sullivan's Safety Cushion Heels to you is generally the same as the price of ordinary heels, in spite of the fact that they cost the repairman more. Your repairman could make a bigger immediate profit on any one of half a dozen substitutes — but O'Sullivan's always mean satisfied customers, and satisfied customers mean increased business.

Ask for O'Sullivan's Safety Cushion Heels when you leave your shoes—see that they are attached. The O'Sullivan Heel Company.

2 SLAIN, 2 HURT, IN GUN DUELS OVER MONEY

Antonio de Napoli Killed in Cambridge; George Forogone Watertown Victim

Two men are dead and two others dying today as the result of shooting affrays in Cambridge and East Watertown caused by arguments over money and the free use of liquor.

The dead men are Antonio De Napoli, thirty-one years old, of No. 118 Hampshire street, Cambridge, and George Forogone, forty-two, of No. 52 Crawford street, Watertown.

The wounded men, both of whom are at the Cambridge Hospital, are Joseph Bova, thirty-five, of No. 2 Hearn street, Watertown, and Fred Vigna, forty-two, of No. 101 Arlington street, Watertown.

De Napoli is alleged to have been shot dead by Joseph Bova, thirty-three, of No. 48 Watson street, Cambridge, during a row in Bova's home over $7 De Napoli had given Bova as a deposit on a tenement owned by the latter.

SLAIN IN COLD BLOOD.

It is said De Napoli went to recover the deposit and found Bova in an ugly mood from drinking wine. An argument ensued in which Bova is alleged to have whipped out a pistol and shot De Napoli in cold blood.

Bova was later arrested on the charge of murder.

Forogone is alleged to have been slain by Vigna when they became involved in a row over money at the East Watertown railroad station. Vigna is said to pacify the man and was shot through the chest in doing so.

Vigna was charged with murder of Forogone by the Watertown police today, and a guard stationed at his bedside in the Cambridge Hospital.

PEACEMAKER WOUNDED.

Both Vigna and Forogote are said to have used pistols in the duel, which threw the community into an uproar.

Forogone died before he could be taken to the hospital. The others were taken there in a serious condition.

Russian Bolshevism a Failure, Emma Goldman Declares

Famous Anarchist, Disappointed and Disillusioned, Says Revolt Is Doomed

Miss Goldman is writing this series from Russia fresh from a two years' stay in that mysterious land which she has just succeeded in quitting. After being barred from several other countries through the influence of the Bolsheviki she has been permitted to enter Sweden. It will be recalled that the writer, who is known throughout the world as an Anarchist, was deported to Russia together with Alexander Berkman by order of the Department of Labor in December, 1919.

Miss Goldman needs no introduction to the American public. She has been a thorn in the side of government officials for many years. Possessed of a brilliant mind and political understanding, she has committed herself to her belief in anarchism practically all her life. Perhaps she, above all other travelers in Russia, is best qualified to see and judge the effect of the Bolshevist revolution there. It is on this subject that she is writing.

Her narrative is one of deep interest. In breaking her silence of more than two years she reveals in the following articles her disappointment in and disillusionment by the Russian experiment.

It is needless to say that in presenting them the Boston American disavows any responsibility for the views she expresses or for the conclusions she reaches, which are entirely personal to her. Because of the importance of the subject Russia and the necessity of throwing upon it all possible light, from whatever source it may shed, the American feels it is discharging a duty to the public in presenting her articles.

Stockholm, Sweden, March 27.—The Russian Revolution as a radical social and economic change meant to overthrow capitalism and establish Communism must be declared a failure

In estimating the various factors that crushed the revolution it is not enough to point out the role played by the counter revolutionary elements. To be sure, their crimes are heinous enough to condemn them unto all eternity. These Russian "patriots" — monarchists, cadets (Constitutional Democrats), Right Socialist-Revolutionists, etc.—filled the world with their clamor for intervention. What was it to them that millions of their countrymen and thousands of their victims from all lands were slaughtered in the unholy war against Russia?

They lived in perfect safety and security; neither the bullets of the Cheka nor the devastating hand of hunger and typhus could reach them. They could afford to play the game of patriotism. But, then, all this is sufficiently known to require no further elucidation. What is known is that the Russian and allied interventionists were not the only actors in the great social drama which ended in the death of the Russian Revolution. The other actors are the Bolsheviki themselves. It is of their role that I shall speak now.

"DOOMED AT BIRTH."

Perhaps the Russian revolution was doomed at its birth. Coming as it did upon the heels of four years of war which had drained Russia of her best manhood, sapped her blood and devastated her land, the revolution may not have had the strength to withstand the mad onslaught of the rest of the world. The Bolsheviki claim that the Russian people, though heroic enough for great outbursts, lack the perseverance necessary for the slow, painful every-day exigencies of a revolutionary period. I do not admit the truth of it.

(Copyright by International)

But, granted that this contention is well founded, I yet insist that it was not so much the obstacles from without as the senseless and cruel methods within Russia that have killed the revolution and placed the yoke of despotism upon the people's neck. The Marxian policies of the Bolsheviki, the tactics first extolled as indispensable to the life of the revolution only to be discarded as harmful after they had wrought misery, distrust and antagonism, were the factors that slowly undermined the faith of the people in the revolution.

"FAILED UTTERLY."

If there was doubt as to what constitutes the greatest danger to a revolution—outside attacks or the paralyzed interest of the people within—the Russian experience should dispel that doubt completely. The counter - revolutionists, backed by allied money, men and munition, failed utterly; not so much by the heroism of the Red Army as by the revolutionary enthusiasm of the people themselves, who fought back every attack. Yet the Russian revolution has died an agonizing death. How, then, explain that phenomenon?

The main causes are not far to seek. If a revolution is to survive in the face of opposition and obstacles, it is of the utmost importance that the light of the revolution be held high before the people; that they should at all times be close to the living, throbbing pulse of the revolution. In other words, it is necessary that the masses should continuously feel that the revolution is of their own making, that they are actively participating in the difficult task of building the new life.

"THE IRON HAND."

For a brief period after the October revolution the workers, peasants, soldiers and sailors were indeed the masters of their revolutionary fate. But soon the invisible iron hand began to manipulate the revolution, to separate it from the people, and to make it subservient to its own ends—the iron hand of the Communist state.

Cynicism and coarseness have taken the place of the idealist aspirations that characterized the October Revolution. All inspiration has been paralyzed; popular interest is dead; indifference and apathy are dominant. Not intervention nor the blockade — on the contrary, it was the internal policies of the Bolshevik

"Senseless and Cruel Methods Placed Yoke of Desperation on People"

State that alienated the Russian people from the revolution and filled them with hatred of everything emanating from it.

"POOR MUST SUFFER."

"What is the use of changing?" now say the people. "All rulers are alike—the poor must always suffer." It is this fatalism, coupled with submission of centuries, which has helped the Bolshevik in their dominion over Russia. Have the Bolsheviki learned from experience that the end does not justify all means?

"To be sure, Lenin often repents. At every All-Russian Communist conclave he comes forth with his mea culpa, "I have sinned." A young Communist once said to me: "It would not surprise me if Lenin should some day declare that the October Revolution was a mistake."

Indeed, Lenin does admit his mistakes—but that does by no means prevent him from continuing the same mistaken policies. Every new experiment is proclaimed by Lenin and his zealots as the height of scientific and revolutionary wisdom. Woe be to those who dare question the justice or efficacy of the new measure! They are at once branded as counter-revolutionists, speculators and bandits.

RAPID CHANGE OF FACE.

But presently Lenin again repents, and then begins to devide his flock as a fools for having believed that the experiment was at all possible. After deluding Russia and the world for four years by his avowal that Communism is in the making in Russia, Lenin at the last Congress of the All-Russian Soviets covered his comrades with ridicule for their naivete in believing that Communism is realizable in Russia now. Yet the prison doors are still closed upon those who mildly suggested the same thing three years ago.

The Brest-Litovsk peace marked the beginning of all subsequent evils. It was a deliberate denial of all that the Bolsheviki had proclaimed to the world — peace without indemnities, self-determination of all oppressed peoples, no secret diplomacy. Yet the Bolsheviki made peace with German imperialism over the heads of the German people.

PEACE OF BETRAYAL.

The price of that peace was the betrayal of Latvia, Finland, the Ukraine and Belorussia.

The result—several years of civil war, the disruption of the revolutionary forces, when unity was so vital to the defence of the revolution, the beginning of Red terror which is continuing to this day.

The peasantry of the Ukraine and of Belorussia knew how to drive back the German invader, but it has never forgotten or forgiven the treachery of the Bolsheviki. The continuous presence of a million people in the Ukraine is "liquidating the bandits" bears witness to the love of the Ukrainian peasants for the Communist State.

The ratification of the Brest peace, which Trotzky refused to sign, which Radek—then in a German prison—declared as the bankruptcy of the revolution, while Joffe signed it "with closed eyes," as he said, was the signal for long open and secret resistance of the peasants to the Bolshevik State.

The peasants, who were at one with the workers till the Brest betrayal, turned with hatred and antagonism from the Bolsheviki, who claimed to represent the peasants and the workers. Lenin demanded the ratification as a breathing spell for the revolution. It was one of his many blunders, but the most costly one. It strangled the revolution.

GIRL WHO GAVE BAD CHECKS ON PROBATION

Springfield Banker Assures Court She Only Overdrew Her Account

Heinele Goldin, twenty-two years old, daughter of a Springfield banker and merchant, was arraigned in municipal court today before Chief Justice Bolster charged with passing worthless checks amounting to $22.50. She pleaded guilty and was placed on probation to make restitution.

The girl appeared in court accompanied by her father, Albert Hurwitz and Louis Goldberg. The hearing was held at the bench. She was attired in an old rose hat, a plaid skirt, a brown cloth coat, mixed gray scarf and wore overshoes.

The girl's father, Joseph Goldin, told Judge Bolster his daughter always had a check book and it was a case where she must have overdrawn her account. While her father was talking to the court tears started to roll down her cheeks.

Mrs. Feingold of the Jewish Welfare League walked over to the girl and led her to the office of Mrs. Margaret Kennedy, the probation officer.

On Wednesday, March 15, Miss Goldin registered at the Copley Plaza as "Rita Davis of Smith College." She was alleged to have purchased goods amounting to $22.50, giving in payment three checks signed "Olga Gleason," drawn on the Second National Bank of Northampton, according to the charges.

The checks were found to be worthless, she was arrested the following Friday by police inspectors as she was leaving the Copley Plaza to attend a Harvard fraternity dance.

ARMOUR CALLED IN STOCKYARDS PROBE

Kansas City, Mo., March 27.—With J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, president of Armour & Company, subpoenaed as a witness, the Department of Agriculture's hearing of complaints against the packing company was scheduled to open here today. Charges of monopolistic practices in the conduct of the Mintietoe Yards here, tending to depress the price of hogs and interfere with open competitive trading, were brought against the Armour Company in January by J. P. Swift and Frank Wittepoon, Liverpool commission men, acting for the Kansas City Livestock Exchange. The initiation of the Federal Packer-Stockyards Control Act of 1921 is charged.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs. Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief, its harmlessness, its certain action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large sixty-cent case from any drug store, and then if you should eat something which doesn't agree with you, if what you eat lies like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach, indigestion vanishes. It is the most efficient antacid known—the certainty and ease with which it overcomes stomach and digestive disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the most perfect effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

JEWS LAUNCH DRIVE TO HELP WAR REFUGEES

Many Thousands Subscribed in Generous Response to Appeal at Opening Rallies

The Jews of Massachusetts responded generously at the opening of the big drive to help the suffering Jews in the famine-stricken regions of Eastern and Central Europe.

At scores of meetings in cities and towns in the State, hundreds of thousands of dollars were contributed to the cause.

It has been four years since any concerted effort has been made in Massachusetts to help Jewish war sufferers, and the present plea is being answered in such a wholehearted manner that the entire success of the appeal is assured.

The drive in Metropolitan Boston will take definite form April 2, when Louis Marshall of New York, Judge Harry Fisher of Chicago, Lieutenant James H. Buker of Chicago, Felix M. Warburg of New York, and others meet representatives of the city's Jewry to discuss the best methods of obtaining Boston's ratio.

Among the large cities and towns in the State who have already launched their campaigns, are Lowell, Lawrence, Lynn, Worcester, Clinton, Newburyport, Peabody, Taunton and Springfield.

Today more than 5,000 volunteer life savers opened a thorough canvass of every Jewish resident in the determined effort to raise Massachusetts' quota of $1,150,000. The drive lasts ten days.

Louis E. Kirstein at the launching of the campaign in Worcester said that self-respect and duty must prompt Massachusetts Jews to give liberally.

"In entering upon this life saving expedition," he said, "the Jews of Massachusetts must be guided by the fact that conditions abroad are far worse today than they were four years ago, when the cannons were thundering, and that the national appeal is a supreme effort to save the remnants of those new life, vigor, brightness, more color and abundance.

2 MEN WITH LOWELL AUTO HELD IN ELIZABETH

Elizabeth, N. J., March 27.—Fred Richards and Earl Cassidy of Rochester, N. Y., excited the suspicions of Patrolman Sattler when they whizzed through here today in an automobile bearing a Massachusetts license. At police headquarters Richards is alleged to have admitted he stole the automobile Friday in front of a Lowell, Mass., theatre. Men, automobile and a quantity of cigarettes, shoes and gowns which they had aboard were held pending receipt of word from Rochester and Lowell authorities.

Russe Dancers Who Deny That They Are at War

FOKINE GIVES PREFERENCE TO PAVLOWA

Postpones Boston Appearance One Week So That Dates Won't Conflict

"Ladies first," says Michael Fokine.

Rumors of a war between Russian dancers because both the Fokines and Anna Pavlowa were announced in Boston for Tuesday night, April 11, were set at rest yesterday by a telegram from Michael Fokine received at Symphony Hall.

I seems that Fokine was booked for a return visit to Boston for April 11 without his being aware that on the same night Pavlowa will appear at the Boston Opera House. The Pavlowa booking was of several weeks standing.

"I admire Mme. Pavlowa too much to wish to appear as competing with her," wired Fokine, and Mme. Fokine feels the same way. "I gladly yield precedence to the lady and I will come to Boston a week later, on April 18, at Symphony Hall.

"Please express to the newspapers the fact that there is no war between Russian dancers. Nothing but friendship.

RADIO STUDENTS SHOULD FIRST STUDY WAVES

Theory of Currents Most Important in Learning How to Use the Wireless

By A. B. HOAG.

The best preparation for anyone who plans to set up a radiophone receiving set in his home is an understanding of the theory of wireless.

This will aid him to overcome many of the little difficulties that present themselves. It will show the why and the wherefore of the wiring, and will add a large measure of enjoyment to the use of the instrument.

The theory begins with a description of the wireless waves that carry the music and the words from the broadcasting station to your home. These are actual waves, whose size and speed can be measured and whose direction can be determined, but which are invisible.

If you drop a stone in the middle of a quiet pool of water a series of little waves will radiate in concentric circles about the place where the stone struck. Wireless waves radiate in much the same way about the aerial of a transmitting station.

They are, however, much broader than water waves and travel much faster. When it is said that a station is sending at 360 metres, it means that the waves which radiate from that station measure 360 metres (very roughly 400 yards) from crest to crest. They all travel at the same rate—186,000 miles a second. Wave lengths as great as 20,000 metres are used for trans-oceanic wireless.

ALTERNATING CURRENT.

As these waves travel through the ether they impinge on, or strike, the aerials of receiving stations, and set up in them a very feeble electric current which alternates in time with the waves. It is this current that must be used to operate the ear phones of the receiving set.

This current is an alternating one. That is to say, it goes first in one direction and then in the other, changing very frequently, perhaps as high as 500,000 times a second. This will not operate ear phones for three reasons: 1—The current is alternating or oscillating too fast. 2—The current is too feeble. 3—The coils of an ear phone will choke an alternating current.

In order to lower the oscillation rate and to keep the current headed in one direction a detector is employed. There are two kinds commonly used.

Several kinds of crystals, notably galena and cilica, have the unusual property of permitting an electric current to flow through them in only one direction. When an alternating current is set oscillation passes through such a crystal all the current going in one direction is cut out.

ANOTHER DETECTOR.

The other detector commonly used is an audion or vacuum tube. This resembles an electric light bulb with more complicated (and more expensive) "insides." Its theory is more complicated, but its effect is the same as with the crystal except that it is more efficient.

A more powerful current is still necessary before the ear phones will be operated. This is produced in two ways.

A certain length and inductance quality of aerial and lead-in is necessary to have one station "in tune" with another. The theory of tuning is a complicated one, and rather than go into it too deeply, I will have to ask you to take some of the things I say for granted.

The tuner on a receiving set is fundamentally two coils of wire whose relation to each other may be changed. This alteration of position varies the inductance of the aerial circuit. At a certain point this inductance and capacity, as it is called, will equal the inductance and capacity of a particular sending station.

When this point is reached the wireless waves of that sending station will produce the strongest current in the receiving station. Other sending stations will produce currents, but they will be so weak as to be negligible.

The wave-length of a sending station may be varied to suit the pleasure of the operator, subject, of course, to Federal regulations. A receiving station may be tuned to receive just that particular wave length.

Says There's Only One Way to Tell a Real Banana From a Wax One--Eat It and If It Makes You Sick It's the Other One

Fruit is so expensive that several manufacturing concerns are putting imitations on the market. You can go into any department store now and buy wax bananas and papier-mache oranges.

Of course they don't taste as good, but they're cheaper.

They have grape fruit which are made out of cloth. You can eat as many as you want without getting any juice in your eye.

The imitation Hawaiian pineapples seem so real that you can look at one and hear the ukelele's playing.

The manufacturers are making peaches more realistic by putting them up in cans.

The cans are made out of cloth, too, and you open them with a pair of scissors.

One papier-mache apple was so natural that a woman threw it away, she thought it was decaying.

She had seven or eight of these paper apples and used them for pin cushions. She got a new cook one day and that evening the dinner guests found safety pins and needles in their apple sauce.

The next morning the hostess was afraid to serve the marmalade.

And when they had banana fritters for luncheon she fired the cook.

Then the woman had to go out and buy a new supply of imitation fruit. She bought an apple that was so realistic it would have fooled Adam.

And everybody knows that Adam was the best authority on apples.

Next thing you know we'll be having papier-mache cherries. We might just as well have them, we've nothing to put them in.

Fruit isn't the only thing they imitate, they do the same thing with cheese. One man had a cheese which was so real that it attracted all the mice in the neighborhood.

Then he got a cat but it didn't do any good. The mice soon found out that he was papier-mache, too.

He finally got rid of them by putting a real label on the cheese and then the mice thought it was an imitation.

There's only one way to tell a real piece of fruit from a wax one. Eat it and if it makes you sick, it's the other one.

Question Box for Radio Fans

Address all communications for this column to Radio Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. Questions will not be answered by mail or telephone.

Q.—Could a radiophone set be made by an amateur cheaper than a ready-made one can be bought?—G. S., Revere.

A.—Yes. Parts may be purchased from dealers and set up by the amateur. Some of the parts may be home-made. A series of articles on the setup of such a set will begin soon.

Q.—Can you advise me as to any books for the study of radio, as I know very little about it, but have a working knowledge of electricity? —P. J., Revere.

A.—Your radio dealer or a good bookstore will recommend something. Get an up-to-date book, as the science changes rapidly.

Q.—Is it necessary that a house be wired for electric lights to install a receiving set? Does each end of an aerial have to be the same distance from the ground?—D. E. C., Providence.

A.—Other things being equal, a lighting set should work slightly better in an unwired house. The current for a set must be furnished by batteries because the lighting circuit would be unsuitable. The aerial does not need to be level.

Q.—I have a tree about sixty feet from the house. Could I connect my aerial to this? I am sixteen miles from the sea. Could I receive messages from ships?—G. C., North Andover.

A.—Yes to both questions. A longer aerial would probably work better, although this depends on local conditions.

Q.—Can you give me the address of the makers of the enclosed outfit (an indoor portable aerial)?—W. M. O., Wilmington, Ct.

A.—Write to New York Chamber of Commerce. I would not advise you to monkey with indoor aerials if you can possibly set one up outdoors, as they are at present only experimental and depend on local conditions for successful operation. If you are interested in experimenting with the idea, try looping about sixty feet of wire around some such framework as in the illustration.

Q.—I have about $30 to spend on a radiophone outfit. What apparatus would you suggest so that I can pick up some of the Boston American broadcasts and the concerts from Medford? I would like the horn attachment if possible.—E. B., Boston.

A.—Unless you want to rig up a set yourself, your $30 would go toward buying a crystal set, aerial wire and insulators. I am having literature sent you.

Q.—Can more than one person listen in on the same aerial?—H. J. T., Woodstock, N. H.

A.—Practically any number of receiving instruments may be linked up on the same aerial and used at the same time.

Q.—Can you receive radio news from Medford on a tuning coil, detector, condenser, phones, and a twenty-five-foot aerial?—W. H., East Bridgewater.

A.—Your aerial is pretty short and might or might not work satisfactorily, depending on local conditions. A crystal detector would not work probably, but an audion or vacuum tube detector would. The rest seems O. K.

FINDS 'NEST OF BOLSHEVISTS' IN QUINCY

Col. Kincaid Calls for Armory and Well-Trained Military Force

Colonel Henry L. Kincaid today appeared before the legislative Ways and Means Committee and asked for a $75,000 armory for Quincy. He said:

"We have the worst nest of Bolshevists in the Commonwealth. The rottenest sort of literature has gone out from our city. The safety of the Commonwealth depends upon the safety of Quincy. Our police force is entirely inadequate. The State should see that we have a well-trained military force. Our firearms and ammunition are at the command of ill-feeling people. Massachusetts must look to itself for military protection.

Mayor Bradford of Quincy, Adjutant-General Jesse F. Stevens and Colonel Warren E. Sweetser spoke.

MRS. HARDING TO GET BOYS OUT OF JAIL

Youngsters Serving 5 Years for Postoffice Break to Be Released

By International News Service.

Washington, March 27.—Three small boys, aged seven, eight, and eleven years old, now serving five-year prison terms for alleged burglary of a postoffice in West Virginia, will soon gain their liberty and be returned to their parents, through the interest and intervention of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, it was learned today.

An investigation of their cases the Department of Justice, which followed Mrs. Harding's intervention, disclosed an unusual set of circumstances which led to the imprisonment of these "youthful desperadoes."

Officials said today that they never should have been sentenced, not alone because of their tender years, but also because the evidence in their cases did not warrant conviction. They have already served about six months in the National Reform School here.

The boys are Andy Bergola, seven years old; Frank Bosko, eight, and Teddy Bosko, eleven. Their parents live at Wierton, W. Va. They were tried in the Federal Court of Northern West Virginia before Judge Baker and were sentenced, with seven other older boys, ranging in years are up to 16, each to five years at penal servitude.

The chief evidence against the youngsters, it is now shown, was furnished by bloodhounds. The dogs, used by the local police of Wierton, took up a scent at the point of the robbery and tracked it through the woods to a settlement of steel workers.

There the police gathered up the ten boys, and on what is now said to have been purely circumstantial evidence all were found guilty.

The Attorney-General's investigation showed today that the three youngsters along with the seven other alleged "desperadoes," as they were called by the district attorney, were put through the "third degree," and that police officers at Wierton wrung confessions of guilt from the boys.

The boys later denied their guilt, but apparently were victims of police prejudice, in a locality where the steel workers are under the lash of police authority.

3 HELD AFTER SERIES OF HOUSE ROBBERIES

Testifying in Municipal Court that two defendants on trial for possession of burglars' tools had confessed to at least six house breaks in Malden, Mattapan and Dorchester, Patrolmen Campbell and Metting told Judge Sullivan that police of two cities were making application for larceny warrants. Barney Katz and Joseph Gins, both of Lynde street, West End, were charged with four flat breaks. Frederick J. Bender of Temple street was charged with receiving $300 worth of stolen silverware. All pleaded not guilty and were held in bonds of $5,000.

TWO PLEAD GUILTY TO DRIVING AFTER DRINKS

Martin L. Kelley of Spruce street, Watertown, pleaded guilty to driving an auto while under the influence of liquor and paid a fine of $50 in Newton Court today. Charges of driving without a license and drunkenness were placed on file. In the same court Walter N. Spinney of Charles street, Waltham, also pleaded guilty to running an auto while under the influence of liquor and paid $50 fine.

THE MONSTER'S WEB

Figures for 1921 Show Enormous Increase Over 1920 in Alcoholism Cases.

The following comparative table shows the increase in alcoholic cases treated at the City Hospital during the years 1912 to 1921, inclusive. The same ratio would apply also to the relief stations.

The increase in 1916 and 1917 over the previous years is due to the fact that alcoholic patients taken to the City Hospital by the police were kept there for observation.

After 1917 there was a drop on account of the lid on the sale of whiskey, but it will be seen that the number of cases increased from year to year until the number in 1921 was about two and a half times over that of 1920.

FIREMAN GOING TO BLAZE IS RUN DOWN

Struck by Truck, Which Does Not Stop, in Front of Engine House

Samuel Pope, thirty-two years old, of No. 17 Washington street, Charlestown, driver for Deputy Fire Chief Shallow, hurrying to Engine Company No. 4's house to respond to an alarm in the North End, was bowled over by an automobile truck today.

He is in the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from a fractured right foot.

The truck, which did not stop, felled Pope just outside the engine house.

The fire, in a factory building at No. 12 Marshall street, drove employes of the American Upholstery Company, on the fourth floor, into the street. It was extinguished at a loss of $4,000.

The fire started in a cotton picking machine.

Convict Stealing Home to See His Wife Is Killed by Train

He stole away from the job, planning to visit his wife, and was crossing the railroad tracks for a short cut home when he was hit by a train.

SPORT WRITERS SPURNED BRIBE FROM HARVARD

Offered $100 to Limit Advance News on Yale Game, Says Crimson

Offers of $100 bribes to Boston football writers to refrain from mentioning the Yale-Harvard game until the week immediately preceding it were indignantly turned down, according to a statement made in the Harvard Crimson.

The assertion appears in an article on how best to "curb" the newspaper men as suggested by Eugene Reynal, Harvard sophomore, as a means of "improving" football.

Reynal writes to the paper suggesting that "the limitation of publication" could be easily accomplished if those sporting writers who would not agree to stop "this get back at Yale" talk were barred from the press box and the field at the big games.

In commenting on this suggestion the Harvard Crimson says:

"As a remedy for the situation, which is not such a great evil anyway, Mr. Reynal suggests that publicity be limited. To do this arbitrarily is an impossibility. A few years ago the sport writers of Boston papers were offered $100 each to refrain from mentioning the Yale game.

"They refused, claiming that the importance of the game was due largely to them. Nor would any benefit result from restricting the information given out after practice; the only result would be that the papers would print a large amount of football news regardless of its authenticity."

As for barring the sport writers from the press stand, the Crimson points out this would be difficult. "It would require that every one except undergraduates and alumni be excluded."

President's Pastor Points Moral in Dodge's Arrest

Washington, March 27.—John Duval Dodge, young Detroit millionaire recently sent to the workhouse for drunkenness and reckless driving, furnished the text of a sermon by Rev. W. S. Abernethy, President Harding's pastor.

The minister advised rich fathers to take Dodge's escapades as a moral. He compared the millionaire's career to that of Saul and declared him to be "going the suicide route."

"No more certain way of ruining a boy has ever been devised than that of loading him down with a lot of money," said the President's spiritual adviser.

"The pace at which he has been traveling is so rapid as to make the average man dizzy."

TURKEY GIVEN NEARLY ALL HER CLAIMS

Porte to Retain Armenia and Keep Constantinople by Allies' New Terms

Paris, March 27 (By the Associated Press).—Turkey is conceded nearly all her claims, except those to Adrianople and part of Eastern Thrace, in the memorandum which the allied foreign ministers today forwarded to Athens, Angora and Constantinople with a view to its acceptance as a preliminary peace settlement, revising the treaty of Sevres.

The Enos-Midia line in Thrace is modified so as to give Turkey more territory on the Bulgarian frontier, but the old Turkish capital of Adrianople is excluded.

Constantinople remains Turkey's, and she retains Armenia, with the population under League of Nations protection, but she loses the Gallipoli Peninsular and Mesopotamia.

The foreign ministers give the Greek and Turkish belligerents three weeks in which to reply to the proposed terms.

13 STEAMSHIPS ARRIVE WITH BIG CARGOES

One Vessel Brings 10,000 Bushels of Onions, 13,500,000 Lbs. Sugar on Another

An imposing procession of thirteen big steamships steamed slowly up Boston Harbor early today from foreign and domestic ports, bringing cargoes of every description from many parts of the world. Interest centred in the arrival of the British steamship Croxteth Hall, which broke the onion famine in Boston. Importers were disappointed, however, when the ship brought only 10,000 bushels, when some 50,000 bushels or more were expected. The onions sold for about $10 per hundredweight, as compared with a normal price of $3. The Croxteth Hall also brought 12,000 bales of Egyptian cotton and shipments of skins, wool, lentils and tobacco.

Other arrivals included the Moorish Prince from China, Japan, Singapore and the Philippines with a rich cargo of oriental stuffs; the French steamship Ile-de-France from Bordeaux, with chemicals and general cargo; the American steamship Springfield from Antwerp, with German and Belgian products; the Governor John Lind from Porto Rico with 13,500,000 pounds of raw sugar, and the tanker Dean Emery from Tampico with 2,600,000 gallons of oil.

The coastwise arrivals included passenger liners from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Savannah, the big freighter Walter A. Luckenbach from Pacific ports, and colliers from Chesapeake Bay coal ports.

Mazola combines quality and economy in equal proportions. You do not have to pay twenty to thirty cents ocean freight rates and duties on Mazola. This is one reason it costs less than olive oil.

Mayonnaise Dressing

1 cup Mazola, 1 Egg Yolk, ½ teaspoon Sugar, ½ teaspoon Salt, ½ teaspoon Paprika, 3 tablespoons Lemon Juice or Vinegar

Add well mixed seasonings to egg, with one teaspoon lemon juice or vinegar and beat well, adding one teaspoon Mazola at a time until mixture thickens, after which the Mazola may be added more rapidly. Thin with lemon juice or vinegar when necessary. The white of egg may be beaten stiff and folded in last.

Waldorf System Incorporated

Two Things for 40,000,000 People

The two principal things the Waldorf System offers you are good, wholesome food appetizingly prepared and quick, convenient service courteously rendered.

For an early breakfast or for a late supper—and all the time in between—there are 94 Waldorf Lunches at the service of the public in 29 different cities.

In all of those Waldorfs you will find cleanliness, efficiency, and loyal team-work. These things are but the outward signs of fundamental Waldorf ideals which have built up enthusiasm among our associates within the System and confidence among our patrons—the public at large.

After seventeen years of sincere effort and steady growth, we are proud that Waldorf System has now earned the privilege of serving over 40,000,000 patrons a year, and the reputation of being the best organized and most efficiently managed system of lunchrooms in America.

MELROSE GIRLS ADMIT CHECK FORGERIES

Two Sisters Arrested; Elder Seeking Man She Says Deserted Her

Accused of passing bad checks and of inducing her sister to do the same in order to get funds to hunt for the man she loves, Mrs. Alice H. Hall, 19 years old and pretty, of Melrose, is under arrest at Rochester, N. Y., with her sister, Alta M. Trumbull, 17 years old.

Mrs. Hall went to Rochester, she told the police, in search of Henry Bums, a soldier, who, she says, is the father of her eighteen-months-old baby. He was discharged from service in Boston more than a year ago. No trace has been found of him.

Bums boarded with the Trumbull family at No. 3 Fuller court, Melrose, and was said to have been intimate with Mrs. Hall, who had parted from her husband.

The girls confessed to passing the bad checks at the First National Bank, Malden. They were employed in a tea garant in that city.

According to the girls' confession as given out by the police, Mrs. Hall and her sister went to the bank with two checks signed by "Annie Bigelow." The checks to the amount of $40 and $111 were supposed to be drawn on the "American Trust Company."

The Bigelow woman and the trust company, the police said, are fictitious but the girls found no difficulty in cashing the checks, as they were known at the bank.

Dispatches from Rochester say that the girls did not take their situation seriously.

HEAR DEBATE ON ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY

Colonel Charles R. Gow Sees Advantage to Boston in Project

Colonel Charles R. Gow, president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts and Henry F. Merrill of Portland, Me., chairman of the Maine State Commission on Rivers and Fisheries, today debated upon the feasibility of the proposed St. Lawrence River waterway project before three hundred Boston business men at the Chamber of Commerce today.

Colonel Gow, in favoring the project, declared that after Canada has developed the canal around Niagara Falls there will be but 100 miles of water between Duluth and the sea that cannot be navigated by ocean ships. This water includes three rapids between Prescott and Montreal, which it is proposed to obviate by three locks of modern canal.

Montreal, he said, is destined to become the grain port of the Atlantic and it is idle to debate the reunion of Boston's commerce in grain.

When the Niagara canal is finished grain will be moved from Chicago and Duluth to Montreal for about five or six cents a bushel, as against a rate of fourteen cents to Boston.

The canal will enable Boston to extend its rail and water commerce with lake ports, and to bring raw materials here cheaper. We may see packing houses and flour mills, and even steel mills, springing up on the lands recovered from Boston harbor flats.

Commissioner Merrill, in reply, stated the project had been twice investigated by the United States government, the last time under Roosevelt's administration, and both investigations proved there were insuperable difficulties in the way of the project; Colonel Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal declared the project to be neither practical nor feasible.

Of the 1,403 steamers built by the United States since war was declared in 1917, only 186 could use the proposed canal. The average depth of the lake harbors is eighteen feet and six inches. To fit them for ocean shipping, even such ships as could use the canal, would require the spending of untold millions, by the government.

Colonel Gow, in discussing the possibilities of cheaper electricity generated by the project, declared that hydro-electric power could be delivered for over New England for one cent per kilowat hour. Commissioner Merrill said this argument, like most of those advanced by the proponents of the scheme is a mere generality. Who, he asked, is to deliver the power?

Following the debate several of the audience questioned the speaker on various points.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Big Outpouring of Society to Witness Bolm Ballet

By BETTY ALDEN.

"BALLET INTIME" and "Krazy Kat!"

Whoever heard of a more beautiful combination of the comic and classic than a presentation of the Adolph Bolm "Ballet Intime and John Alden Carpenter's new pantomime, "Krazy Kat!" But we'll admit that there is something thoroughly "intriguing"—as they say now—about the combination.

At any rate, society bids fair to be well represented at these two presentations taking place this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Shubert Theatre. The executive committee of the Bolm Ballet is comprised of persons of prominence in both musical and social circles, and the list of patronesses for the affair are of equal distinction.

The latter list includes: Mesdames John Gardner Coolidge, Stoughton Bell, George P. Baker, Henry Forbes Bigelow, Harold J. Coolidge, Allen Curtis, Ernest B. Dane, Richard C. Dixey, Eben Sumner Draper, William Arthur Dupee, William Ellery, George Richmond Fearing, Allan Forbes, Frederick L. Galacar, John L. Gardner, John Chipman Gray, Edwin Farnham Greene, Richard Valden Hale, Edward Livingstone Hill, Francis Lee Higginson, M. W. DeWolfe Howe, Malcolm Lang, Charles Martin Loeffler, Guy Murchie, Henry Parkman, Andrew J. Peters, Murray Potter, F. L. W. Richardson, John L. Saltonstall, Henry H. Sawyer, Philip Spalding, Walter P. Spalding, Augustus Thorndike, Frederick S. Whitwell, Roger Wolcott, E. Schier Welch, Wallace Goodrich and Nathaniel Thayer, as well as the Misses Rose L. Dexter, Alison Hastings, Phyllis Robbins and Fannie P. Mason.

The performances at the Shubert Theatre is to aid the Municipal School of Music at Rheims, and is under the direction of the Division of Music at Harvard and the Boston branch of the American Friends of Musicians in France.

Evidently the leasing of Newport's public beach is proving a very tasty bone of contention, and the fight at Little Rhody's watering-place de luxe continues merrily on and on.

On the one side is the element which plans to transform the beach into a second Coney Island, a project entailing an expenditure of some $250,000, while on the other side are the members of the exclusive Summer colony. The latter have organized a company to manage the beach, offering to spend the same amount in improving the property.

The Board of Aldermen of Newport have again postponed the decision of the leasing of the property until this evening. And in the meantime Mayor Mahoney is being deluged with torrents of telegrams from the creme de la creme of the Summer colony, in protest of the proposed "Coney Island" project. Among those who have informed the mayor of their dismay at this proposed venture are several Bostonians whose names are of no little importance in the social world. They are Mrs. George Richmond Fearing, Miss Ellen F. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Agassis (Mabel Simpkins) of Mt. Vernon street, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Livingston Hunt and Miss Martha Colman, the latter formerly of the Hub.

Others from New York and other cities who belong to the ultra-exclusive colony at Newport and who have voiced their protest include August Belmont, Gibson Fahnstock, Maurice Rocbe, Mrs. Wortham James, Mrs. David King, Mrs. R. Horace Gallatin, Edward J. Berwind, Mrs. Leroy King, Alfred Tuckerman, Reginald C. Vanderlip, Dr. Henry B. Jacobs, Miss Elizabeth E. Waring, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. T. Shaw Safe, Henry H. Redmond, Miss Rosa Anne Grosvenor, Mrs. Wilbur E. Wilder, Mrs. Frederic P. Sands and J. Norman de R. Whitehouse. Additional telegrams have been received from Bishop James Henry Darlington, Miss Fanny Foster, Mrs. Richard W. Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Rhinelander, Marsden J. Perry, and Mrs. John J. Wysong.

It does not require a particularly vivid imagination to picture the garishness and out-of-placeness which such a "little Coney" would have upon the scenery at Newport, a resort which has always stood for the last word in exclusiveness.

$50,000 LEFT TO EMPLOYE BY C. R. NOYES

Estate of "Grand Old Man" of Market District Valued at Million

Charles R. Illsley of Melrose Highlands, for thirty-eight years the trusted bookkeeper of the late Charles R. Noyes, "grand old man" of the market district, has been left a $50,000 legacy in the latter's will, it became known today.

The good fortune that has befallen Illsley is also shared by every other employe of the fruit and produce business which was conducted by Noyes, on North Market street, for the past fifty years.

Among other employes will be distributed a lump sum of $25,000.

Another bequest in the will provides for funds to be used in caring for a pet cat that has made its home in the late marketman's office for the past decade.

The estate is valued at more than $1,000,000.

The generosity with which the "grand old man" thus remembered his employes stood out only through accident, every effort having been made to keep the provisions of the will secret at the request of the maker.

When the bequests became known, however, Attorney Leon C. Guptill of Winthrop, who filed the document, verified the details.

In addition to the large sums left his employes, Mr. Noyes bequeathed $50,000 each to two relatives of his late wife. These relatives are Mrs. C. Rowe of Rowe's Corner, Me., and Miss Rose N. Allen of Portland, Me.

A brother, Frank M. Noyes, of Livermore Falls, Me., his wife, Eva, and their children are beneficiaries to a much larger extent. It is understood that they were left practically all of the late marketman's real estate, as well as the business itself.

GIVEN APPLE ORCHARD.

A little old apple orchard in Jay, Me., which played a homely but important part in the accumulation of the Noyes' fortune, was willed to Roy Dean, who has faithfully tended the place for several years. Willard G. Rose of Arlington, who started work in the Noyes' store as a boy, is made president of the firm under the terms of the document.

The generosity of their late employer in thus remembering them in his will did not come as any great surprise to the employes of the store. Their sentiments were unanimously expressed in a statement made by Illsley.

"I am not realy surprised," said he latter, "I had a feeling that Mr. Noyes would do something like that. He was always thinking of his employes—always trying to do something for them. He never forgot to put a little something extra in the pay envelopes every Christmas. He was the biggest hearted man I ever saw."

GIRL ARRESTED IN RAID FOR DRUGS

Attractive, stylishly dressed and wearing a beautiful sealskin coat, Jeanette Sherman, about twenty-five years old, pleaded not guilty to possession of morphine and a hypodermic needle before Judge Sullivan in Municipal Court today. The drugs were found when police raided the young woman's room at the Hotel Appleton, hidden beneath blankets of the bed on which the woman was sleeping when the squad entered. The girl will be given a hearing on April 5.

Do You Walk With a Smile or a Limp?

Wearers of Cantilever Shoes walk with an easy poise that bespeaks freedom from foot troubles. They step out with easy carriage, ankles straight and steady, feet arched with natural grace. They can walk for a long time without fatigue. And that swinging walk brings health and a greater capacity for happiness.

Well-fitted shoes contribute importantly to your strength and to your happiness. They must provide room for the toes, and freedom for the flexible arch of the foot. They must not check the free play of the muscles.

The Cantilever Shoe has a flexible shank that bends with the foot. The shoe yields with every step, encourages the foot muscles to exercise, and keep strong.

The Cantilever last follows the outline of the foot. The toes may stretch luxuriously. They point ahead as they should for comfort and correct posture. The set of the heel tends to distribute the weight so that the body is well-poised. And the shoes are good-looking, graceful, trim, correct.

Foils Bandit Trio by Palming $100 Bankroll

The latest way to foil bandits is to slide your bank notes between your thumb and your forefinger when you are ordered to "throw up your hands."

At least that's what John O'Brien of No. 11 Dell street, Somerville, did when three armed men came upon him.

The robbers got O'Brien's leather bag containing two dozen eggs and a few expense blanks. But $100 in bills O'Brien had collected from chain stores while engaged in his work as collector, were pulled from his pocket by O'Brien himself and thrust between his thumb and forefinger.

He raised his hands over his head at the command of the bandit trio. After they had snatched up his leather bag and rifled his pockets the robbers departed.

CHARGES BOARD HAS DELAYED BOULEVARD

Charges that the Metropolitan District Commission has delayed the construction of the proposed Old Colony boulevard in Dorchester and Neponset were made by Commissioner John N. Cole of the State Department of Public Works at a hearing today before the legislative Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. Cole said the commission has never turned over to his department a completed plan for the completion of the boulevard. But one plan was turned over, he stated, and that for a culvert.

Representative Herbert W. Burr of Boston said: "With all the representatives running to Washington to look after ships and docks, it seems rather funny that there is no body of men big enough to look after Boston's own streets. Our streets are narrow, dinky, and after all, of what avail would all the ships in the world be should we shut up all our streets?"

The proposed plan provides for an appropriation of $1,660,000 for the construction of a highway from Dorchester to Quincy. It was advocated also by Mayor Bradford of Quincy and Representative William J. Francis of Charlestown.

WALSH SAYS HE IS NOT A 'MALE VAMP'

Film Star Sued by Seena Owen for Divorce States He's a Home Lover

Los Angeles, March 27.—Here's how George Walsh, film star, and former Fordham University athlete, is faring along life's highway, according to his own statement today:

He receives a salary of $500 a week, not $1,500.

He has not accumulated $50,000 worth of worldly goods.

His wife does not help him keep the wolf from the door by contributing to the support of the Walsh family.

He remains at home evenings and goes to bed early so as to be fit for work next day.

While thus remaining at home he looks after daughter Patricia, five.

He has not been interested in any other woman, particularly Estelle Taylor.

He has been, he says, the target for a flatiron hurled at him while shaving. He has, as a corrollary of the flatiron, a temperamental wife.

All Walsh's negatives, as here set forth, are contained in a cross complaint brought against him by Seena Owen, film celebrity and in private life, Sione Auen Walsh.

Walsh said the domestic dissensions began soon after the birth of the daughter and that the climax came when Mrs. Walsh deserted him, which, he says, was in New York, March 1, 1918.

The cross complaint describes a property settlement made January 14, 1920, whereby the wife released him from all monetary obligations—in consideration of $5,000.

Walsh states he tried in dissuade his wife from continuing in the picture following the birth of their daughter, and that this was a factor in their differences. He places his wife's salary at $500 a week.

Mrs. Walsh herself contributed to the literature of the family differences with a statement issued through her attorneys. In this the screen star refers to the action of Miss Taylor, who last week filed a suit against her demanding $100,000 damages for alleged defamatory accusations made in the divorce complaint. In his cross complaint Walsh asserts the original Walsh Dorchester to Quincy. It was advo- Dorchester to Quincy. It was advocated also by Mayor Bradford of Quincy and Representative William J. Francis of Charlestown, was for the purpose of extorting $25,000 from him.

SELECTING PROPER CLUB IS PROBLEM FOR THE ABLEST GOLFERS

By JOCK HUTCHISON

I have written of the problems of the beginner and the problems of the duffer, which are no more difficult to solve than the problems that face a good golfer. No matter how well one plays he never becomes so proficient that he can get through even a single round without having to make some important decision on a play that affects the scoring.

The chief causes for error of the star usually come from the selecting of the proper clubs, a most important part of the game of golf.

In Scotland and throughout the British Isles the caddie is a much more necessary adjunct to the game than he is in this country. The caddie considers himself accountable for the loss of a match just as much as if he had handled the clubs himself and feels that when a player refuses to use the club that he hands to him he is going to make a terrible mistake.

It is every caddie's business to know the course and judgment in distances is of the greatest importance. It is the caddie's business to know each player's game and if not acquainted with it to pick up the information on the first hole or two.

There are certain holes that are always a source of worry on account of the shifting tees and pin holes. The experience of the caddie is a big help in this case.

Players are prone to depend entirely on the shot as played by their opponent or partner. If an opponent takes out a mashie and reaches the green it is a great temptation to ask for that club from your caddie although he has a spoon or a midiron ready to offer you.

This is one of the real problems that confronts the low handicap golfer because a mistake in judgment just once during the round is likely to cost one the match.

There are golfers who love to fool their opponents in this way. Sometimes when the balls are fairly close together, with the opponent's away, he will take out a club that he does not intend to use and remark that it is only a light iron shot. Quite often one falls for this and asks for a light iron himself.

The result is always disastrous. He fails short of the green and the opponent, with a pretended look of surprise, puts back the iron and uses a spoon or a brassie just as he had intended to do in the beginning.

Although the honor goes to the man winning the last hole, it is not always an advantage. Of course there is an advantage in sending out a long drive and then putting it up to your opponent to equal it, but there is also something in knowing just what you must do to win.

The golfer who plays them safe every time he finds his opponent in trouble does not always come out victorious. This is always a problem to be considered for many a hole has been lost through safe play. I mean by this that one is gambling on his opponent's second shot. In such a case the one who plays safe often is forced to struggle for a "half."

It has been said that the most difficult shot in golf is the four-foot putt for a "half" on a hole that one had figured he had a cinch on winning. The mental side of the game comes in here, as a player when settling himself to making the putt cannot help but feel chagrin that the supposed mistake in judgment or his rival's lucky freak shot has robbed him of his just due.

CLASS IN MAIN WRESTLING CONTEST

Mahmout and Stecker Should Provide Thrilling and Exciting Bout

The more the wrestling fans study the program arranged by Promoter Tuohey for Wednesday night in Mechanics Building the more they realize that every bout spells "class" in the real sense of the term.

This is especially true of the event in which Mahmout, duplicating the feat of "Stan" Stecker of pasting through terrific war experiences and then "reaping back" and taking the measure of nearly every one of the stars who have developed since the Italian went to get into the big muss overseas, will meet Joe Stecker.

That Mahmout was the classiest wrestler of modern times has always been conceded. That he retains this skill and power in spite of the war is plain from his work since he returned. Whether Mahmout with his uncanny science can outwrestle the Nebraskan with his deadly scissors-hold, is the question that Wednesday night's battle must decide.

Frank Judjinski, the Harvard coach, and Nat Pendleton, both of the 200-pound class and ambitious as well as clever, clash in the opening number, while Gus Stengel, the powerful Swede star, will test his wares against Renato Gardini in a one-fall finish match.

In all the foregoing matches pin falls only will count, but Promoter Tuohey will stage an extra bout to be wrestled under the rules of the New York State commission so those how rolling and flying falls work.

Arlington Plays Last Game

Arlington High School girls' basketball team will close a successful season, Friday, playing Swampscott.

WOLLASTON GOLF CLUB TO BUILD NEW COURSE FOR 1922 TOURNEYS

The Wollaston Golf Club will begin alterations as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The new plan of financing calls for the lifting of the mortgage and the transfer of the property now leased.

This will be accomplished by the purchase by all present, and incoming members of certificates of ownership of $200. The aggregate sum will pay interest on the bonds and buy the property.

• • •

There will be a surplus of a few thousand dollars which will be expended in the development of the present course and also in building five new holes.

• • •

The present first and second fairways will not be altered, but the first green will be dug and raised. The new green will be raised and banked in the back and the ground on the fairgreen immediately in front of this green will be cut substantially away and levelled, to permit the carrying of a ball directly to the ground in front of the present tee to the green itself.

Hereafter, in the Summer when the ground was hard, this was not possible for the experts.

The third tee will be placed at a spot about midway between the first tee and the second green, probably well as clever clash in the opening number, while Gus Stengel, the powerful Swede star, will test his wares against Renato Gardini in a one-fall finish match.

In all the foregoing matches pin falls only will count, but Promoter Tuohey will stage an extra bout to be wrestled under the rules of the New York State commission so those how rolling and flying falls work.

Arlington Plays Last Game

Arlington High School girls' basketball team will close a successful season, Friday, playing Swampscott.

The present thirteenth will be the new seventh. The marsh will probably be ploughed and the land properly drained and seeded to permit the laying out of two new holes in addition to the present fourteenth, all parallel to the present fourteenth hole which will be played as No. 10.

• • •

A new drain will be constructed at the back end of the marsh and the old one probably partially filled if it is found to be possible to do this economically.

No. 11 will be played from the fifteenth tee and will be a one-shotter, 150 yards, in the hollow beyond the tenth green in front of the sixteenth tee.

Number 12 tee will be placed just in front of the long bunker across the present 14th fairway, on a high spot of land, and the old 11th hole will be played from the tee. Numbers 13, 14, 15 will be the 6th, 7th and 8th holes, except that the present 8th will be abandoned, the flight of the ball carrying over the green to a spot in the first hollow of the present 10th fairway beyond the cross trap of the present 16th fairway.

Number 16 tee will be near the fence on the top of the hill short of the present 10th green, and play will be northeast in the direction of the present 10th tee. This will be about 210 yards.

The 17th tee will be to the left of the present 9th green, play being due west to the present 17th green. The 18th hole will remain the same, with the green pushed back ten yards toward the 9th and 17th tees of the present layout.

• • •

If it is found possible in the course of time to develop the marsh land as planned, the new eighteen-hole circuit will be between 6,200 and 6,500 yards, with the par 12th hole measuring over 500 yards, probably 550. With this hole increased in length and the new 40-yard holes added in the marsh, the par of each nine will be about the same in and out, and it will be as stiff as any 72 one would care to negotiate.

• • •

Stewart Sanderson, the club pro at Wollaston, is the first individual in the North thus far this season to register a one a no hole. He did this at the third hole Saturday in a round with his friend Ralph Thomas of Framingham and Weston fame. This was also the first experience of his kind Sanderson has enjoyed.

Thomas is a good sensational, who has not yet signed for this year. Some high grade club looker-upper has probably about took him up. Ralph hits them true to the marks when in form.

While Alec Herd and J. H. Taylor, the two British professionals, will not visit this country until the early Summer, it will be good news to local fans that arrangements are being made for their appearance in the vicinity of Boston.

• • •

Merrimack Valley will probably be the scene of one contest and it is planned to have their opponents from the local professional ranks. It is highly probable that the British pair will also give an exhibition on Thomas Plant's course at the mountains, Rald Pate, at Alton Bay.

It is the purpose of those arranging the details of these matches to have local professionals compete against this pair.

• • •

William Cooper, who has been conducting a Winter golf school in company with Dexter Brown, will be located after April 1 at the Franklin C. C. during the Spring and Autumn. During the Summer he will be the golf instructor at Oaks Bluff.

• • •

Lou Waldron and his partner, F. E. Williams, leave for Paris on April 15 on business and pleasure. It's a safe bet they'll hike along their bag, 'cause he's mean opponent either, his ambition always being in the seventies.

• • •

"No use talking, you can't keep them out," says Dan Horan, official State handicapper. Last year's list of those golfers, who had State ratings, rose over a thousand in one year to 6,557 and now a conservative estimate for the 1923 list would be 7,500 names.

Where are we drifting, especially if they all decide to take in the same tournament on the same day? Dan has been requested to adjust the Granite State Association's handicap list also and has accepted the task.

SECOND ROUND IN PINEHURST TOURNEY

Resume North and South Golf Championship for Women at North Carolina Resort

Pinehurst, N. C., March 27.—Second round matches in the North and South golf championship for women will be played here on the championship course today. Practically all of the golfers, who survived for the second round, have had experience in national championships.

The feature match will bring Miss Glenna Collett of Providence against Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow of the Merion Cricket Club.

Other matches are Miss Edith Cummings, Chicago, and Miss Sarah Fownes, Oakmont; Mrs. C. E. Ubeiacker, Arcola; and Mrs. William West, Philadelphia, and Mrs. M. J. Seammell, Oakmont, and Mrs. W. A. Wolf, Essex.

Miss Cummings and Miss Collett are in opposite sides of the draw and are expected to reach the final round.

AMATEUR RING STARS BATTLE TONIGHT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

By JACK CONWAY.

The New England amateur boxing championships at Mechanics Building tonight will open a hectic week of boxing for Greater Boston fans. While the simon-pures are settling their ring disputes, Pal Reed and Mike Morley will be swapping blows at Lynn.

There will be about sixty bouts at the amateur title quarrels this p. m. The best of the simon-pure athletes will be seen in action and all kinds of thrills are assured.

There will be contests at 112, 115, 118, 125, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and in the heavyweight division.

The big professional show of the week takes place tomorrow night when Irish Johnny Curtin, latest bantamweight sensation, battles Young Montreal in a ten-round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building.

As Curtin has twice knocked out Bobby Dyson and has gained decisions over Abe Friedman, Terry Martin and Chick Suggs the fans are eager to see if he can also conquer Montreal.

Everybody appears anxious to get a glimpse at Irish Johnny Curtin of New York, who has been smashing his way towards the world's bantamweight championship. They will receive their opportunity when Curtin collides with Young Montreal of Providence in a ten-round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night.

Here are a few of the things Curtin has done:

Knocked out Bobby Dyson twice.

Punched Pete Herman so hard that the former bantamweight king says Irish Johnny is the toughest hitter of his pounds in the world.

Walloped his way to a decision over Terry Martin.

Conquered Abe Friedman.

Made Chick Suggs look like as also ran.

DEMPSEY TO START FOR TOUR OF EUROPE

By JACK DEMPSEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Everything is all set for a little jaunt to Europe, which gets under way on April 11. Jack Kearns, my manager; Teddy Hayes, my secretary, and Joe Benjamin, my lightweight pal, are going along with me.

For nearly two years I've had a pleasure tour of Europe in mind. But not until now have things been right so that I could get away. And so we sail on the Aquitania without any real idea as to how long we'll be gone or what we'll do when we get there. But the chances are that we'll just loaf around, see all that we care to see, and come back when the pleasure end of it is over.

There have been some stories that I may fight Carpentier and Becket while there. Also there have been reports that I am going to do a vaudeville tour of England and France. But so far that's only rumor stuff.

• • •

It's possible, of course, that if I do get a real offer to appear in the music halls of London or Paris I may accept. But that's something which Kearns will decide for us when we get there.

No fight offer have been made to me. Whatever possibility might have existed concerning a return battle with the Frenchman in Europe seems to have been shot to pieces by reports the other day that Carpentier is in bad way physically and not only never will fight again, but must take a long rest to save his health.

• • •

Maybe that's all hokum; maybe the story about Georges being so sick isn't true. I hope not, for he's a mighty likable fellow and the worst I hope for him is a hundred years of good health and happiness.

As for Beckett:

Well, if they want me to take him on, I see no real reason for ducking the match. But to be really honest about the whole thing, I hardly think any promoter in England or France will hang up a real purse. Beckett was knocked out by Frank Moran, who long ago passed his fistic prime here. Carpentier knocked out Beckett—and I knocked out the Frenchman.

• • •

So, based on the way they reckon things fistically, Beckett couldn't be figured to have a great chance. And inasmuch as promoters must have evenly matched men—men that seem evenly matched—to warrant their putting up big purses, I doubt whether any serious offer will be made for me to fight Joe.

But if one comes I'll be willing—oh, very willing—to mix it with Joe Beckett.

• • •

My decision to go to Europe wasn't made until after the Dreb-Gibbons fight in New York. I'd hoped that one or the other of those boys would do something so spectacular that he'd stand out as a really dangerous opponent of mine. But the sensational didn't happen. Greb won, but no one has offered to match us.

So that eliminated the prospect of my fighting the winner of that battle on July 4.

• • •

The Willis contest is still on the fire. A lot of folks think I ought to fight him. I'm willing. Willis wants to mix it with me. That makes us both mighty anxious to battle. But no promoter has made a really sincere offer. Been lots of talk—but it stopped at the press agent stuff; because no one has laid any cash on the line.

So without a doubt the prospect until Labor Day, at the very earliest—and maybe none then—it looks like idleness around these parts for something like six months. So I'm just taking advantage of what might be called an "off season" and am going to the other side of the ocean. But no definite match arrangements I may make there I'll always hold myself ready for immediate recall if there's someone for me to fight.

For, more than anything else in the world, I want to mix it in battle with any man or men who have risen to ranking where they seem to menace my title as heavyweight champion of the world.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

When five of the shortstops of one league figure within eighty-five points of each other in the dope, and when only a hundred points cover the figure difference between the first seven shortstops of the other league, the indications are that, in spite of fortunes paid for a few stars, there is mighty little difference in values after all

The hitting strength and the fielding strength so seldom fall to the same man that the weaker fielders make up in batting what they lose in the defensive end of the game, and the strong fielders cover their attacking weaknesses by brilliant defence, so that in the end their values run close together.

In the dope we find that the New York Yankees, by acquiring Everett Scott, have gained the most valuable shortstop in the business, although the difference between his value to his club (and remember that is all we are figuring—the value of an individual in a certain position) is only 9 points greater than that of their deposed leader to his new team.

Whether the Yankees really made much of a gain or not remains to be seen, it is certain that their own gain was only a little, unless they counted Peck's usefulness to them at an end, whereas they have lined up a new opponent in Washington and strengthened a competitor which is getting dangerous. Scott, beyond doubt figures best of the American League shortstops, and it will be something of a surprise to find what a competent and steady player Gerber has become.

* * *

Gerber has lifted the Browns into third rank among the American League shortstops, and in steadiness he really ranks next to Scott, who is the most reliable as well as the most dependable of all shortstops—a man who is there every day, playing the same steady and desperately cool game, regardless of the situation. He is not a great hitter, but few of the shortstops are great hitters, and he is a dangerous man in the pinch. Looking over the batting, you will discover that the New York pitchers annihilate whom he batted—but his average arrestly—and with the Boston twirlers to his against, instead of 364, and some of those fellows who reduced his average, he may be counted upon to add at least twenty points to his average.

* * *

Sewell, who has improved persistently ever since he joined the Indians, has gained fairly high ranking and should continue to improve. The others are only mediocre, although Chicago has considerable power there. Detroit is still fussing around the position is not at all satisfactorily filled. The chances are that Cobb will be forced to make several switches, and that alone does not promise to add much strength

The ranking of the shortstops of the National League is closer than in that of the younger organization, and we find the lowly Chicago Cubs at the top of the list, due to the brilliancy of Hollocher, who was not at his best last season, at least not during a great part of the season, due to injuries, but his hitting, while heavy, was erratic, which is peculiar as he has been noted for consistency.

This Spring Hollocher is reported going better than ever, and the whole Cub team seems filled with enthusiasm new to them—a dangerous sign for opponents. The infield promises to lead the hustling

* * *

Rabbit Maranville does not figure quite as well as he did last Spring. He went better during the greater part of the season last year than he has done in a long time—but he exploded near the end, blew all to pieces and dropped from a .230 hitter down to around half that average right at the critical time of the season. Perhaps he was overpraising himself and his reputation was inevitable. It cannot be expected that he will go as well during the coming season. The Rabbit is getting along in years, although no age ever will dim his spirit.

Basketball all Winter and much traveling is not helpful to aging athletes.

* * *

The Cards achieve fourth rank in the list. Lavan failed to take advantage of the easy hitting to any extent last season, and was really below his normal. Also he did little base running and seemed a trifle slower, but not in fielding. His steadiness makes up considerably for that. Boston crowds up within a point of St. Louis, and we find Philadelphia and Brooklyn close together Crane has promised to develop into above average ability, but he has not done so as yet. The Reds, having decided that Crane would not fill their needs, have fallen back upon a strictly Count League infield. It cannot be doped high even on the most promising theories.

The best thing that can be said of the Reds' shortstop outlook is that the management is trying to develop something instead of being content to stand for mediocre baseball

In the next article we will compile the infields and see how the teams compare in the inner line of defence, before proceeding to the study of the outfielders

Eight Home Runs in This Contest

By Universal Service.

Marlin, Tex., March 27.—The New York Yankees' second team defeated the Indianapolis club of the American Association, 7 to 5, in a game featured by eight home runs.

Kinsella, Samida, Kopf and Hale got them for the winners. Morrison got two for Indianapolis and Purcell and Krueger the others.

BRAVES ARE IN NEAR PERFECT CONDITION

Will Play Three More Games With the Washingtons This Week

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 27 — The Braves started their final week of stationary training today with a flock of athletes in as near perfect condition as any in last year's record, in the joyous "Spring time when the young men turn to thoughts" is genuine and every think.

It will be a rather soft week for the sun-tanned baseball chasers, who have the hardest part of their work behind them, and are now entering the polishing off stage. There will be games every day for only a couple of morning sessions.

The Senators, now fifty-fifty in the big series, will be played three times, Tuesday at Tampa, here Thursday, and back in their own backyard on Saturday. Both teams detrain Sunday and start on one of those one-night stand parades for the North.

Dick Rudolph a Yank-to-be will oppose the varsity on the days when there is no big league competition and it will be a busy week for the young pitchers. They will get their final tryouts and then Manager Mitchell will start placing them with the minor leagues

There are so many experienced birds on hand that it is going to be a tough job for any of the new comers to hang on. Cooney and Braxton the baby southpaws of a year ago will make the grade for a time at least, but of the strangers it would seem that only Lanning and Anderson have any chance

This pair has a bit on the rest of the novices and are likely to work out a wonderful four before any decision is reached regarding their seasonal parking places. The pruning knife will fall on some of the infield material also, the big cut coming just before the Pullman Hotel becomes the baseball home on Sunday

Manager Mitchell is as happy as a kid in a deserted candy store over the training thus far. He hasn't missed a practice session since the whistle blew on opening day, and he thinks that the stretching of some of the injured athletes. It's a whole lot different from a year ago, when the Braves had more bad Spring arrangement than all the rest of the league

At present Fillingim is the only pitcher who isn't ready to go to the first line, and "Filly" never was much of a Spring performer. His scraper never comes northward until after the others are pronounced fit

Frank Gibson also has a weak flipper, but there's nothing serious in the matter with it and a few more days' rest will fix it OK, according to Jimmy Nears, who ought to know

Dinty Barbare's blistered dogs have recovered sufficiently for the young man to get down to serious business and he is now engaged in the dual stunt of trying to chase Kopf off short, and preparing himself to be first baseman, when left-handed pitchers are in there.

Barbare is a whale of a hitter, and he may repeat Hoyke, who didn't show much stuff last season when the off-siders were on the hill. Walter is in great shape this Spring though, and has no end of the cold that weakened him for months a year ago, and affected his all-round playing

The Kopf party: Kopf made the Braves infield a thing of machine seal precision and beauty, and combined with Ford, Larry finishes up a very efficient double play team. The ex-Red covers more ground than Barbare and is a shade better field er, though not at all the batter. It was fielding weakness, rather than lack of hitting, that lost quite a few games in 1921, if you remember

Manager Mitchell isn't making any predictions to speak of, but he is willing to admit that he never had a ball club in better condition at this time of the year.

FOURTH PLACE WILL DO FOR THE PIRATES

BY NICK FLATLEY

Hot Springs, Ark., March 27.—On the final lap of the pennant journey last season the Pirates developed engine trouble, which permitted the Giants to swing by and into the World's Series.

A few days ago on the up grade leading into Hot Springs, where the Cubs are boiling out, the local motive drawing their special grunted and refused to move any further, leaving the athletes stranded for more than four hours out in the Arkansas rustic scenery, only a few wild throws from their destination.

It was practically the same situation as last Fall when they stood still as the Giants thundered on and Frank passed them, and now that they were stalled at the start probably they will glide along smoothly over the last few tips of the long trip which will begin next month. At least that is the impression gained in the camp of the foes.

George Gibson, the energetic manager, is optimistic. Of course this is only natural. There are sixteen ranges of champions scattered from Florida a lemon crop to the goats of Catalina Island

* * *

Only once last season did Gibson make a prediction. That was in Boston after the Pirates had beaten the Braves and were leading the Giants by seven and one-half games. Then George broke the silence with which he had surrounded himself all year, by exclaiming: "It looks pretty good for us now."

* * *

From that moment on it looked pretty good for the other gents so George would prefer to lose one of his ears rather than make any kind of a prediction. The popular belief among the Pirates, however, as tersely expressed by Rabbit Maranville, is that "we will be one, two all season."

Gibby will have to make some changes in his outfit this season. He will stand on the same deck but the rigging will be altered somewhat At present Barney Dreyfuss is declared along without Walter Schmidt, who was offered $5,000 this season but refused to be in the same class as the Yankees by demanding an even $10,000.

The infield also will be shaken up a trifle. Jacob Grimm, of course, will be at first base and Maranville will be at short. It was intimated recently that the Rabbit might be moved to second base and "Pie" Traynor sent to short, but the Rabbit emphatically declared that he would have something to say about that.

Although Gibby might make several shifts before the season starts it is believed that "Chilton" Tierney will be at second and Traynor at third. This will give him a fight for infield. Grim, Tierney, Traynor and Maranville. Gibby thinks a lot of Traynor and believes he is all set to go this season

Clyde Barnhart, who broke in so well at third base last year, may get back there again, but at present the dope is that he will serve as utility infielder and pinch hitter.

* * *

The passing of George Whitted to Brooklyn, at the waiver price, has caused some comment. Gibby tried to put over a trade when he would send Whitted, Dave Robertson and Schmidt to the Dodgers for Zack Wheat and Hy Myers, but just when it seemed as if it would go through, it burst like a soap bubble and Squire Ebbets obtained another bargain

As far as Schmidt is concerned, however, Gibby is done. He says "It is up to Walter now. I intended with Dreyfus last year, and got him what he wanted I can do nothing more."

The Pirates are well stocked with pitchers, in fact they have one of the best balanced mound staffs in the league. There are the veterans Wilbur Cooper, "Babe" Adams, Earl Hamilton, Johnny Morrison, Whitey Glazner, Harold Carlson, Moses Yellowhorse and Jimmy Zinn, a formidable bunch of hewers

Among the newcomers are Freddy Blake, a graduate of George Stallings' private school at Rossmoor who is teaming up with his battery mate, young Maddox, Johnny Hilgenworth of Wichita Falls, whom Chick Frazer claims is a ringer for Ed Ruebach; Floyd Wheeler from Birmingham; Phil Morrow, a brother of Johnny's, who also hails from Birmingham; Cannonball York a Kentuckian; Jess Martin, a semi pro performer from Oklahoma, and Earl Whitehill from Birmingham Whitehill and Martin are south paws.

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

PHILLIES—ATHLETICS

Philadelphia — Three exhibition games are on the Philadelphia National's schedule at Lexington, Ky., before they start northward Thursday

The first squad of Athletics was on the way to Galveston today, where an exhibition game will be played. They defeated San Antonio yesterday 15 to 6. Tilly Walker's batting was a feature

GIANTS

New York—Chicago, which would rather beat New York at baseball than its population, had a measure of satisfaction at Dallas, Texas, yesterday, when in an exhibition game with the giants the White Sox punched the ninth inning offerings of Hubbie Barnes and won 8 to 7.

YANKS—DODGERS

While the Chicagoans were outdoing the McGrawites, the other New York clubs, Brooklyn and the Yanks, were engaged in a contest over in New Orleans. The Brooklyns won, 8 to 5, due to the excellent hurling of "Dazzy" Vance, a former Yankee.

Babe Ruth suffered a slight injury to his side while at bat in the third inning and retired from the game in the Fifth

CUBS

Chicago—Zeb Terry, Cub second baseman, will be out of the game for at least a month because of a fractured wrist bone suffered in batting practice yesterday at Los Angeles where the Chicago Nationals defeat ed the Los Angeles team.

Max Flack, regular right fielder, is at home at East St. Louis with a fractured skull and will be out two months, his doctor said

Giants Get World's Series Emblems

By Universal Service.

Dallas, Tex., March 27.—The Giants received their World's Series championship emblems from Commissioner K. M. Landis and each of the regulars also received a check representing 1 per cent. of each players' share of the receipts.

The money was held up by the National Commission, the picturesque Judge announced, in the belief non residents had to pay New York state income tax, which was found to be erroneous. It was a day of much feting for the Judge and the players.

Pitchers Ryan, Shea and Causey, who were sent barnstorming with the second team, returned to the regulars.

BROOKLINE IN FIRST SPIN ON RIVER

Coach Francis Niccolls Has Four Boats Trying for the School Crew

By FRED C. LANE.

Brookline High School oarsmen will make their initial dip in the Charles River this afternoon when four crews arriving to represent that school in rowing will engage in the first practice spin of the season

As yet no definite quarters have been arranged for the crews but through the courtesy of Dr. Howe of the Technology Rowing Association, they will use the B. A. A. boathouse until further notice.

Nothing will be left undone by Coach Francis Niccolls to win the B. P. Keith trophy this year. Cambridge Latin will likewise make a strong effort to win this highly prized trophy. Both schools have won two legs and unless some dual house appears the cup will go out of competition.

The first boat was made up of Williams, bow; H. Tyler, No. 2; H. Orth, No. 3, and Captain N. Smith, stroke. Dickey Arunson was coxswain. The other candidates who survived the pruning knife were in the other boats

It is the plan of Coach Niccolls to have the boys row every afternoon that is available, which means five afternoons a week

* * *

A strong booster of Brookline High, who is interested in schoolboy rowing has donated a motor boat to the athletic association which will be used by Coach Niccolls.

* * *

A meeting of the athletic council of Huntington School voted the following men track letters and sweaters for the 1921 season: Captain Curtis Parker, William Spinney, Richard MacFarland, Davis Quirk, Lawrence Simmons, Edward Hall, William Luce, Gail Robinson, Carleton Dewsnup, Ralph Holman and Manager Curtis Kingsbury

The outdoor season is now under way at the Back Bay school and the following schedule has been drawn up:

April 28-29—Pennsylvania Relay Games
May 5—New Hampshire State Interscholastics
May 12—Harvard Interscholastics.
May 20—Brown Interscholastics.

Quincy is now being trained to send a relay team from Medford High to the Penn relay games. A fund sufficient to meet all the expenses of such a trip should be obtained early

* * *

Six lads and Coach Ed O'Donnell will make the trip. On past performances Captain Joe Kelley, Harrington Moore, Fennell, Kelly, Henry Hornig and Maurice Davidson have a mighty fine chance to make the jump.

* * *

The candidates for the Commerce baseball team look promising. A schedule, taking in several trips, has been arranged. When Concord, N. H., is hit by the team a post card is looked for from Barney Nolan in his bout of friends who will wonder in what capacity Barney is touring the universe

Coach Donahue will have the squad out for the first time this afternoon. Outfielders Rasmussen Barney Nolan, Captain McSweeney, Dick McDonald, Eddie Moore, "Mike" Norton, John Sullivan, Bill Dempsey, Murphy and Nicholson are in fine shape after the Winter season.

Albert F. Hughes, faculty manager and coach of the Lexington baseball teams, after a week of practice announced another championship team for the High school.

Clover A. C. Wins

Clover A. C. defeated the Harvard S. A. at Sullivan square, 10 to 8 Mahoney, Edwards, Gallagher and West featured for the winners. Kyle and Burns featured for the losers The batteries were Edwards and West and Fowler and Burns

RUTH PICKS THE BROWNS AS YANKS' RIVALS

By BABE RUTH

New Orleans, March 27.—Judging from what I have heard in conversations with major league scouts and minor league managers who have visited our camp, three rival clubs believe they can beat the Yankees to the pennant this year. They are the Cleveland Indians, the Washington Senators and the St. Louis Browns. One or two of the others may feel the same way about it but aren't claiming anything.

The Browns appear to be especially confident, rather more so, I gather, than either the Indians or the Senators. The latter want to see how their patching and stacking up before they come out in the open with any extravagant claims and Manager Tris Speaker of the Indians never was disposed to take anything for granted

They tell me he is hopeful that the champions of 1920 will repeat this year, but that he is not so blinded by the many good qualities of his club that he cannot see its many glaring weaknesses

But the Browns are absolutely convinced that this is their year, or so I am given to understand by folks who have been with them at Mobile. They feel that for the first time in many seasons they have a well balanced club combining offensive power with defensive strength and brewed with a lot of speed

They figure that they have improved both their pitching staff and their infield at no sacrifice of needed ability elsewhere and that, thus reinforced they are a first-class bet to win their first American League pennant

The Browns of last year did not have enough good pitchers and were weak at second base. As I recall it, they tried four or five youngsters at the keystone sack and none proved satisfactory until they landed McManus.

This young man has been going great guns this Spring, I'm told, and so have Gerber, at short, and Gilhorbe at third. The latter, by the way, was a much better ball player last season than he was credited with being, a pretty fair fielder and far more dangerous hitter than his old team mates at Washington ever thought he'd be.

With Sisler on first to complete the quartet, the Browns have the strongest and most resourceful infield they have shown in several seasons and their outfield, with Johnny Tobin in right, Baby Doll Bill Jacobson in centre and Kenneth Williams in left, ranks pretty close to the best in the league

Given good pitching, such a combination as this is bound to make a world of trouble for the most formidable five, and the indications are that the Browns will have a very fair flinging corps this year, provided Davis Danforth can deliver

This left hander seems to be the keystone of the arch of the Brown's pennant chances. If he makes good the Browns will be a tough club to beat. But if he proves a "bust" the Browns are likely to find themselves stymied this year just as they were last, for lack of enough good pitchers to supplement the efforts of Urban Shocker.

Scouts and others who has seen the Browns in training at Mobile tell me that Danforth looks as though he'd do. He hasn't been asked to extend himself as yet, but he'll soon get a chance to pitch against the hard hitting Cardinals, and if he survives that test the Browns will be justified in believing they are all set to make one whale of a fight for a pennant this year

Of course I do not believe that the Browns or any other club can finish ahead of the Yankees this year, and in another article I will explain in detail just why I look to the champions of 1921 to repeat this season. This article, however, must be deferred until Manager Huggins has decided just what he intends to do with his outfield.

NOT the most hopeful person of artless, credulous mind could have from the pseudo name Prudence Cole Potts a vision of love-tress there is something about the word that throws a distinct damper on all such stuff as dreams are made of. It confines up no running brooks, nor sunday breezes. There with. It rather a vision of factory chimneys and streams of workers with dinner pails pouring forth on the last stroke of the midday whistle.

Nevertheless Pottstown was a living exponent of that famous query, "What's in a name?" And its answer if it could have talked would have been couched in the most correct English with the most correct accent and in a most unassuming manner. Pottstown with little interruption points of indignation here and there, not too eager to discredit its reputation for good breeding, but sharp enough to put the doubter in his place.

For be it said reverently, Pottstown was all that it claimed to be and more. Of course it had its Lindmarks honored in the footnotes of guide books.

Mr. John Whitney took up the reins and the fortune of Prudence has charming wife and children lived there. The Potts family died out, the Whitney family flourished, and it was strong. The Whitneys as of Pottstown became the synonym for respectability.

Great cities sprang into being, mighty newspapers spread the breadth of the land, steam and electricity and wireless and all the wonders of a century of marvels transformed the country but Pottstown remained as it always had been.

At this another episode in the life of Prudence Cole Potts is being left alone with her two sisters as sole heiress to the fortune, ran away and married and died when her baby was a year old.

It was as though Fate had taken a hand in the calm, unruffled life of the Whitneys.

A Headstrong Beauty

The stunning girl was a lively and headstrong beauty, and the man she loved was a careless and handsome rover. Her parents wrote the girl, "when you receive this note Tom and I will be no more."

Not a word of where or when; no use of running wildly to Philadelphia on the scant hope of tracing them. Nothing to do but wait and wait. But the bride was too happy to keep all her joys to herself, three days later she sent her address and a plea for forgiveness. The Misses Elizabeth and Cynthia never answered that letter, and nothing passed between them until nearly a year later.

It was late May, and Miss Elizabeth was watering the roses that flourished on the trellis by the side door, when a little boy from the grocery store held up a yellow envelope.

Miss Elizabeth walked unhurriedly to the gate, opened the telegram, read it, rolled out in a wild voice, "Cynthia," and grasped the gate posts to keep from falling.

Out of the house by her young sister came running.

"Elizabeth, what is the matter with these?"

Her sister held out the yellow paper.

And Cynthia, reading, learned in five words that the darling they had loved was gone forever.

"If thee had only let me go to her," came the cry from the younger sister.

Contrary to her habit the other made no reply. There would be no going to her now in her earthly self; the words of forgiveness that Elizabeth herself had been longing to speak would never be spoken now. As though of one mind the two women dismissed the message and made their way to the house.

Too Late To Forgive

"If thee will tell the coachman to see what trains we can get," said Elizabeth——.

And this done they proceeded to put on their traveling gowns, to don their quaint hats and to drive to the station to make the trip they now grieved they had not taken before.

Not a long trip, and therefore all the more to be regretted in that the little bride had been so near and yet so far; a small place not much like the great mansion in Pottstown, and on the door a white cross with white roses.

And within a man with set face, very calm, very courteous, who shook hands with them, and led them to the living room.

"Perhaps," he said quite slowly, "even if you didn't care to forgive your sister, you might like to see her baby."

They looked at each other, and each was surprised to see tears in the eyes of the other; they bowed their heads together as though actuated by the same thought, a thought of compensation.

The man left the room and returned with a nurse carrying in her arms a small white bundle.

"These ladies," said the man, "are the baby's aunts——"

He left them together. The nurse looked at the two women; perhaps there passed through her mind a reflection that the little girl she held in her arms might be the means of bringing some of the May sunshine into the lives of these Quakers whose sister had gone beyond.

A Wandering Soul

"Could I take her?" quavered Elizabeth, holding out black swathed arms.

"Thee had best sit down, Elizabeth," ventured Cynthia, and sitting the elder sister received in her arms little Prudence Cole, and rocked back and forth.

"Your sister, Mrs. Cole, spoke of you before she died," said the nurse, gently, "she hoped you would be kind to her daughter."

"Oh, why didn't I come to see her?" wailed the more impressionable Lucy. Idle question, since both knew the answer. Pride is a terrible thing. "Pride goeth before a fall," said the great book. And these two women felt that they had fallen deep, indeed.

Prudence Cole, the mother, was laid away in the family plot in Pottstown, and Mr. Cole returned with them to the Whitney home. They were only too happy to do so to make up to the daughter what they had denied the wife.

Henry Cole left little Prudence in their care; when she was only two he wrote from Ceylon and signed himself "a wanderer," when she was five, a cable, the first ever received in Pottstown brought news of his death.

To the small daughter he has always been a myth; to the motherless had been a potential robber, one who was always on the point of coming to take away their treasures. Now he was dead, and there remained only the question, how and when to tell Prudence.

They compromised after hours discussion on not telling her at all and she grew to the age of ten without knowing whether he was alive or dead. They called her Prue, just as they had called her mother, and every day she seemed to remind them of that sister. It was as though Prudence Whitney had come back to earth reincarnated in the person of Prudence Cole, and the Misses Whitney accepted this fact as a mark of divine blessing.

Most of her time she spent out of doors, in Summer she was like a rose among roses, and in Winter she was a snow maid with redder cheeks than the reddest apple.

And there were a few children spirits of her own age for her mates, girls and boys, most of them boasting descent from early settlers, and forming a kind of aristocracy of their own.

Among them was Henry Carson. Henry was an underage youth who fell in love with Prue when she was seven and a half, throwing dirt at her when she wasn't looking, and making faces at her forever and always. His mother was what is known as a public man, and his mother was one of those persistent women who unite great ability with pride of family. She reminded Mr. Garrison that only great wealth could ever condone the fact that Henry should become her husband. Mr. Garrison took the hint and decided to move out of Pottstown into Philadelphia.

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

(Copyright, 1923, by Star Co.)

"I DID not cut you off, madam," the operator replied with dignity. "Who was talking with you?"

"I do not know. But it was important."

"There is nobody calling you now," was the calm rejoinder. "If any one does call, I will ring you."

Adelaide returned the receiver to its hook and stood undecided. If she only had some idea where to telephone for further news!

Should she summon Mr. Hollingshead? But, no—there would be nothing for him to do now—nothing except share in her anxiety and uncertainty. And his anxiety would be another.

For of course, the message concerned his children. What this surport was she dared not think.

Then she tried to reason the matter out sanely. Probably her first surmise had been correct, and the party had been detained at some hotel out in the country. One of the men had doubtless attempted to telephone this fact. It might have been Mr. Forsyths. He might have used the expression, "Break the news." In a grieving way, knowing how Mr. and Mrs. Hollingswood disapproved of Sunday expeditions.

Yes, that was the condition of affairs, Adelaide decided. There was no sense in her waiting here longer. The wind was still moaning about the house, perhaps some of the telephone wires had snapped when the message was only half delivered. She had heard of suburban wires that were crippled by heavy snowfalls.

At all events she dare not remain longer from her charge. If Mrs. Hollingshead were to awake and miss her she might be frightened.

But when she hurried back to the sick woman's room everything was just as she had left it. The invalid was still in a deep slumber.

Adelaide dared not leave the hall door open to listen for the telephone, fear Mrs. Hollingshead awaken if it rang. So, lying down, she drew the rugs about her again and resigned herself to quietness, her ears strained for a sound from below.

Yet when the sound came she started, violently. Once more, creeping from the room, she closed the door behind her and ran down stairs.

"Hullo!" she called as she took up the receiver.

"Hold the wire, please," came the order, "I have a call for you."

Again Adelaide waited, every nerve taut, her heart thumping madly. It seemed a long while before she heard once more the voice that had spoken fifteen minutes ago.

"Is this Mr. Hollingshead's house?"

"Yes—this is the person you spoke to before."

"They cut me off," the man said, brusquely. "I have an important message for Mr. Hollingshead. Will you give it to him?"

"Yes."

"Who are you?"

"Miss Brown."

"You are not a member of the family?"

"No. Only Mrs. Hollingshead's attendant."

"Good. Then listen. There has been a terrible accident. Do you hear?"

"Yes."

Apple Pie

One and one-half cups of pastry flour, ¼ teaspoon of cream of tartar ¼ teaspoon of baking soda, pinch of salt, 1½ tablespoons of lard. Mix with cold water. I do not handle mine very much, as that is apt to make it tough. Pare 4 good-sized apples, quarter them and slice thin; line pie plate with apples until all used up. Then add 1-3 cup of sugar, a little salt, sprinkle with nutmeg and cinnamon and spread top with small pieces of butter. This makes one delicious pie and is one of the very old recipes.

THERE she stood, super questions, and he had open the first page of his life before her proud, happy, sympathetic eyes, tracing it paragraph by paragraph for her since he had entered into man's estate, and had put away childish things.

"Yes," he said, "it's a good game, after all. The main thing is to get into it and stay there—in it to win—squarely." He laughed unsmiling. "Your superb confidence puts me to shame, dear. Why do you trust me so?"

"Does it please you that I should not do so?"

"Yes Diana."

"Then I affirm and deny nothing which makes me sufficient of a nonentity to suit you, I hope."

"I am suited."

Ten minutes later the bell rang, and Silvette and Jack, followed by Mr. Rivett, came laughing through the hall and into the little parlor.

"Jim! At last!" cried Silvette, giving him both hands.

"How are you, cousin! How are you, Mr. Rivett! Hello, Jack!" he said as they surrounded him with lively greetings.

"How goes it?" inquired Mr. Rivett dryly.

"First rate."

They all had supper together, later; Jack and Silvette bubbled enthusiasm over the play and the splendid cast; Dineen came in and talked business to Rivett in casual undertone; Diana and Edgerton were quieter, even inclined to silence.

About 5 o'clock Diana summoned her maid.

"Please say that I have gone to the studio apartment to get some things from my trunks," she said and wrote out the address in case Mr. Rivett wished to communicate with her.

Then, in furs, walking skirt and veil, and her tired little heart already outstripping her feet, she went out into the sunset world upon the pilgrimage so long desired, so long and wistfully deferred.

Here, pulse beat fast as she entered his street. The sight of the house filled her with sudden trepidation, but she knew that he was not there. She had nearly three hours alone before her, unless the others, returning to find her note, might telephone and interrupt her.

Her key turned smoothly in the lock; she crossed the threshold, holding her breath.

Something behind her—and it was not a sound—made her turn. The white cat sat looking at her with no recognition in its solemn eyes; and when she moved forward, hand outstretched in wistful appeal, it calmly retreated into the demi light of the bedroom beyond.

The sight of the bed overcame her twice before she realized that it was the bed of the apartment. Dazed, she stood for a moment collecting herself, then walked to the door and opened it.

Colonel Curmaw stepped jauntily in.

So astonished was she that she scarcely understood what he was about before they both were on the studio threshold—she instinctively retreating, he advancing, wrenched in a smile so remarkable that it fascinated her.

"So this is your apartment?" he said. "What a discreet and charming little nest!"

"I think you don't understand," she said; "this is Mr. Edgerton's apartment."

He looked at her oddly, then burst into laughter.

"You clever girl!" he chuckled.

"What!" she said, bewildered.

But he only smirked at her.

"Look here, little girl," he said, "suppose you begin to make your eyes behave and come down to actualities. You know what I want; I know what you want. We've been wasting time all Summer. I'm no fool neither are you as you show by selecting the two little nook for a good, sensible talk."

She only stared at him, thinking he had gone mad, and he laughed and twirled his mustache.

"Are you taking me to—marry you," she said, confused.

"Marry you!" he repeated, his aggressive features suddenly blank then jocular again.

"Then what——"

And suddenly staring into its depths of eyes, she comprehended and turned deadly white.

"After all," he said with a sneer "I had a right to think you knew what you were about—a girl, alone, who lives on her wits."

He swung insolently on his heel, and found himself looking straight into the eyes of Jacob Rivett.

"Go out!" said Mr. Rivett in a low voice.

The colonel stared at him, confounded.

"Go out!" repeated Rivett softly. The colonel flushed and utterly discountenanced, started toward the hall, closing the door behind him.

Diana stood stock still, as though turned to stone. There had been a crash outside; then, in rather rapid but irregular succession, a series of thuds. It was Colonel Curmaw's impact with wall and floor; Mr. Dineen had been patiently knocking him down until that battered and half-senseless warrior took the count. Then one careful and heavy kick sent him down the first of the flights of stairs and a moment later Diana heard the door bell.

She opened; Mr. Rivett walked in slowly, as though abstracted; Mr. Dineen came behind, straightening his scarfpin.

"Well, my dear," he said brisk-ly "Mr. Dineen and I stopped at the hotel and your maid told us you had come here to get things out of your trunks. So, if you've finished rummaging, the car is below, and Jack and Silvette are waiting tea for us at the St. Regis."

"Thank you," she said, in a low voice.

"Had you rather not come?"

"I had rather not—if your don't mind."

"Dinner at seven," he said, releasing her hands.

She nodded, forcing a smile.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $5, and you have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup. Instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough. Then the phlegm heals the membranes, and gives almost instant relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex with directions," and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glowy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

CHILDREN MANAGERS

MOTHER HEAD OF THE CONCERN

By Dr. W. A. McKeever

A MOTHER and her three children have organized their group and home on a business basis. The young apprentices are aged nine, eleven, and thirteen. She eleven-year-old being a boy, and they give their forenoon on baturdays to the perform ance of the duties about the home place.

The mother is "manager."

Each child by turn is "foreman."

Each child by turn is "employe."

When taking the place of foreman, unless advice from the others is asked for, this leader must be strictly obeyed. If any errors are committed these are checked up in the mother's capacity as manager. Her idea is not to have things done perfectly from the first, but that each child shall learn by doing and correct his own errors.

Before any person is ready to assume a permanent position as manager he must himself learn how to take orders and execute them—so this wise mother believes. And it would appear that she has here a brilliant idea for the entire country.

Listen to the instructions from the foreman, get his point of view, think the process through before starting, and then carry out orders to the letter—that is an initial lesson in business enterprise and thrift for our boys and girl. The successful boss must learn to boss himself. He must hold his tongue on occasions and make himself do as he is ordered.

Again, the mother explained her explained is a happy one in that it allows for blunders at a tender age when they can be afforded. The tasks about the household are trivial; renovating the beds, rearranging the rooms, cleaning up the parlor, putting the clothing in order for Sunday and the like.

It is not a question of the children's being fond of work. Fatwork child will soon tire from a tired feeling. It is a question of their needing the discipline of laying out and carrying through their own plans, and of the extreme difficulty of making anything worth while out of them unless we early hold them to a regular and rigid rule of reasonable home duties.

Try it, Mother. Try the Satur day forenoon and kindred industrial administration of your household. Elect yourself manager, give the children their turn at being both foreman and employe, and thus aid force and self-respect to every member of the family group.

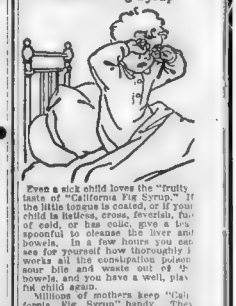
Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"



Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to clean the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation, poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. Then know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

FINANCE and BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

The first day of Spring saw both stock and bond prices at a new high average price for the year. Stocks, indeed, reached the highest point since the outbreak of war.

The last week has also brought more than an ordinary number of other encouraging developments, indicative of unmistakable, though moderate, improvement in business conditions.

* * *

Washington reports appreciable reduction of unemployment.

Railway traffic is increasing very handsomely.

Bank clearings are also increasing, and while the record recently has been slowly losing its Building activity is becoming very general, and all indications point to still greater expansion within the next few months.

Not only are certain steel products being stiffened in price, but new business is now coming in equal to 65 per cent. of the full capacity of the mills, representing the doubling of orders within the last few months.

The number of cotton spindles in operation last month showed a material increase, although the New England strike of mill operatives has since seriously interfered with production.

"Business is gradually approaching its normal state," reports the department of Commerce. It adds that in those industries "which constitute the backbone of American prosperity the improvement, as compared with a few months ago, has been "very marked."

Reports from agricultural States are quite encouraging.

* * *

Bank reserves have again reached a new maximum, and the latest weekly Reserve Banks' statement reveals that remarkable progress has been made in easing conditions where the "frozen credits" strain was greatest.

Rates for time money and mercantile paper have declined, both of much greater importance than fluctuations in call money, in Wall Street.

The principal foreign exchange rates compare well with those of a week ago. A fresh break in German marks, to the lowest point ever recorded, is occasioned by no surprise in well-informed circles, as it has long been foreseen that Germany's whole financial policy could lead only to trouble until a distinctly better course was adopted either voluntarily or through outside pressure.

The resumption here of unrestricted payment out of gold and gold certificates has been effected without causing the slightest ripple, the demand for gold or gold certificates in preference to other forms of currency being negligible.

* * *

So long as securities display buoyancy, the financial community will be easily alarmed over other events or threatened happenings.

Had we been in the midst of a falling stock market, the overwhelming vote in the House for the Soldiers' Bill would unquestionably have started a stampede of selling. It actually had little or no apparent influence.

The Senate's ratification of the Four-Power treaty, regarded in financial circles as "good news," was also accepted very calmly.

* * *

The truth is that the betterment in security prices has been based not on any extraneous incidents, but almost wholly on the growing conviction that American industry and business are gradually regaining stability, solidity and activity, and that there is justification for believing that the gradual improvement will be maintained and become at least a little more marked as the year advances. The fact that sustained despite unfavorable, outcropings abroad and despite a few disheartening developments at home.

* * *

Had the betterment in business and in the investment markets been less solidly based, we would probably have been experiencing considerable unsettlement at this time. Not only would the bonus action at Washington have caused disturbance, but also the threatened coal strike and the support pledged the striking coal and railway unions would undoubtedly have unsettled things more or less acutely.

Yet, although the date set for the coal strike is only a few days off, the security markets are not in the least nervous, but are moving along apparently calmly and apparently indifferently. Of course, it should be explained that in the highest financial and business circles the belief is universal opinion is that the strikers will find themselves waging a hopeless fight, with public sentiment strongly favoring action calculated to bring down coal prices. Moreover, it is well known that reserve supplies of coal are very large. Also, immunities have been secured upon to prevent any coal famine even should the strike prove protracted.

* * *

Some people, including certain prominent bankers, are still pessimistic. They argue that recent favorable developments will turn out to have been merely "a flash in the pan," cannot share in any more than I can become excited over alarmist predictions of an impending slump of prime proportions. I believe we will have sense enough to earn genuine improvement and not indulging in shortsighted recklessness.

Stocks Close Weak in New York; Call Money Falls to 4%; New Low for Marks

BEAR RAIDING IS EFFECTIVE AT FIRST

But Prices Rally at Noon and Are Highest for the Day in the Last Hour

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Although the New York market was weak at the close, final prices were above their lowest by a considerable margin. The upward movement continued to the end. But it was slow and moderate. It was helped along by a reduction of the call rate to 4 per cent. Trading was of good volume, approximating 800,000 shares.

Some stocks made large gains. Kresge being up 1 at 143 in the last hour. Allied Chemical advanced 2.1-6 to 65, a record high. Sears Roebuck was also at a record. Studebaker 3 to 73 at its highest.

Mexican Petroleum was off 1¼ at 116¾ at the close. U. S. Steel was down ⅜ at 94⅜. Davison Chemical 1¼ at 54½, Manati Sugar ¼ at 4, after being down 2. Studebaker 1⅞ at 105½, Baldwin ¼ at 106⅝, Pullman 1⅛ at 122, Bethlehem B ¼ at 70¼ and Canadian Pacific 1¼ at 135½.

After opening weak the market failed to rally during the forenoon, recessions ranging from fractions to about one point. Bulls withstood the bear drive better than industrials and rails, but joined in the afternoon movement in the second hour. Oils, motors and equipments were first attacked and then stocks generally. Petroleum was one of the most active as well as weakest issues. It is rumored that the Obregon government may increase the export tax.

All groups weakened except chain stores. May Department sold at its highest record, 129, and Woolworth at a new record high. Kresge was also notably strong. There was a midday rally and the recovery continued in the afternoon, sugars being prominent in the movement. A number of issues reached highs for th day in the last hour.

Trading sentiment was bearish. It is said that big interests which have long been accumulating quotable stocks have begun distribution for profits. The elimination of the shortinterest has undoubtedly assisted the technical position. Labor troubles are a depressing influence, but are partly offset by the reports of business improvement. It is indicated by a reduction of 11¾ in the number of idle cars. The lowering of the discount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta indicates that the money situation in the South has become more favorable.

Call money opened at 4½ per cent. Foreign exchange was heavy, market selling at a new record low.

Bears Failed to Force Liquidation

By W. S. Cousins.

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, March 27.—There was no definite trend to the stock market today and price movements were, therefore, almost wholly confined to the professionals. The active stock stocks heavily at the opening, and while they succeeded in dislodging a few price from a few issues they were unable to bring about any serious liquidation by the general public, and in the afternoon a rally was ushered in, in the course of which many stocks made up their previous losses.

The stability of the financial markets was clearly exhibited by the action of the bond market, which was not in any way affected by the temporary confusion in the stock list.

It has been part of the tactics of the bears in their recent drives against the market to single out two prominent stocks in each division, hammering them down for the effect upon the balance of the stock list. Today they chose United States Steel, Southern Pete and Davison Chemical, all of which were sold in material recessions in the early part of the day to recover later as they were bought back.

The public has become wary of these tactics and refuses to play the part assigned to it.

Bonds Did Not Weaken With Stocks.

By MUNROE ROBERTS

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, March 27.—The bond market did not share the weakness and irregularity that characterized the stock market today. Strength in the market was confined principally to the local traction issues and to the foreign bonds. Liberty Bonds opened slightly easier, but remained firm throughout.

Third Avenue refunding 4's made a new high at 65, the N. R. T. 6's sold at 89¼ for a gain of ½ and the Public Service of N. J. sold up to 81¼ for a new high.

Today's new offerings include an issue of $1,000,000 5 per cent. bonds loan bonds of San Antonio, Texas; $500,000 6 per cent. bonds of Dallas, Texas, first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, maturing in 1942, at 98½ and interest to yield 5.40 per cent.; and $1,000,000 Central Iowa joint land bank 5 per cent. bonds to yield about 4.75 per cent.

The New Haven Railroad has been given authority to issue $2,250,000 first and refunding mortgage series D bonds, also to sell $1,798,000 equipment trust notes.

Heavy Selling of Curb Specialties

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, March 27.—Irregularity characterized most of the dealings on the Curb market today. The specialties were sold in heavy volume in the early afternoon, giving the market a general weakened appearance.

The fluctuations in oil stocks were narrow.

EVANS OPPOSES FURTHER LOANS TO EUROPE

Declares Money Can Be Better Used Expanding Country South of Us

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, March 27.—There are rumors that there is a strong political from this country to foreign governments and the decline in the interest rate makes the temptation stronger than it has been heretofore.

Examination by the experts in this line of one gigantic billion dollarsis the inadequacy of the security and the country applying will probably not get any Chicago money.

One hears of a proposition coming from Czecho-Slovakia, which has made a noble fight even in new existence, but which is a combination of former units still muddled, in a degree.

There is a feeling amounting to a panic sensitiveness, even among experienced business men, that there is something potent about a government loan, or obligation, that a government is what its people make it and where both governments and people are bankrupt or on the verge of bankruptcy the lender has little to fall back on in case of default.

Moreover, it is not customary to foreclose against a government, whereas, in the case of an individual debtor, the bankruptcy court is available and whatever there is left can be taken over by the creditor.

SAFETY IS QUESTIONABLE.

It is pertinent to ask if these leading financial houses apply the same severe tests to government loans that they do to an ordinary private loan. That is how safe is the security for a government loan, but when a country cannot get enough out of its taxes to pay its own expenses or the people are turning in their money to the treasury grudgingly this resource is not altogether dependable either.

The objection of loans to European governments are obvious at a glance. Some individuals are now far beyond anything in history even when compared up against the increased resources. You may begin with the worst in the lot, Russia, and grade up to the level, which is Great Britain, and fairly ask yourself the question whether your money is safe with them.

There is one other consideration of importance. The countries of Europe are no longer growing countries in the sense in which that term could have been used before or within hundred years ago or farther back. As showing that there is to be a great recovery in Europe the tremendous uplift in the United States after our World War is cited and also the activities in Europe after the Napoleonic wars.

EUROPE WORN OUT.

But you must take a measure of the worn out condition of Europe. It has unquestionably passed the prime of life, as for the present, its sources its history must be one of decline. An exception to this perhaps is Russia, but Russia for the present, is too raw and too far from the station of a highly developed community to be taken into account.

You may even, without distressing stretch of the imagination, picture the time when cities in Europe now ground with the needed to carry forward the next grand movement. Let us expand into those parts of the world where growth is to be expected, such as the countries to the south of us. The very name is the principal attraction for that means opportunity for American energy.

It will indeed be desirable, even necessary, to grant commercial loans and short credits of many kinds to the business men of Europe but let Europe and governments suffocate in their own battle-smoke if they will, rather than let us not ruin our own lungs and dollars by participation.

It is believed that this view of the case will be accepted by the American people, confident as they are seeing with his multiple crops displacing all beautiful colors, his pigs dropping fat, his mills and his hands work making all things needful for human use and his debts a bagatelle compared with those of other countries.

HEAVY TONE TO THE BOSTON MARKET

Trading Narrow and of Less Volume; Curb Is Quiet and Irregular

The Boston market was affected by New York and after a weak opening came through to show a sagging tendency. Trading was of less volume and confined to a comparatively few stocks. Copper had a good tone, but packing issues went down. Rails were quiet and irregular for awhile but joined in the downward movement before noon.

Utilities were firm at prices were still down. Point or more losses were shown by Gray & Davis, Anaconda, Copper Range, Massachusetts Gas, General Electric and United Drug preferred. Boston & Maine C declined two points.

The Curb was quiet and irregular throughout, the principal dealers were Boston & Montana and Crystal. At noon Alpha was up 3 cents at 30 cents, Arcadian up 12 cents, Shea Copper 10 cents at 65 cents, and Texada 1 cent at 61½. Some losses were Boston & Montana 1 cent at 35 cents, Southern Cross 4 cents at 19 cents, Utah 37 cents at 75 cents, United Verde Extension ⅛ at 27½ and Verde Central ⅛ at 28.

MRS. ELVA CAULKINS.

"I have gained thirty pounds since taking Tanlac and never felt better in my life than I do now. Mother says she hasn't seen me looking so well since I was a girl," said Mrs. Elva Caulkins, 303 Blandina St., Utica, N. Y.

"For eighteen long years I suffered from stomach trouble and indigestion, liver, and during all that time I hardly knew what a well day was. As I almost starved myself trying to avoid indigestion, I fell off until I was hardly more than a shadow, and was so weak I was barely able to drag myself around the house. As a result of my long suffering I became almost a nervous wreck.

"This was the condition I was in when I started taking Tanlac, but today I am strong and well, feeling and looking like a different person from what I did a short time ago. It is no wonder to me that so many people praise Tanlac to the skies."

Tanlac is sold in Boston by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Most forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally, just as you must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you have that dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. Your kidneys are cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up often two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

A few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur bring back its vigor, color, gloss and youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxurious. Just a few applications will give you a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

TITLES TEST IS EXPLAINED FOR NEW READERS

It Runs 60 Days, and $5,000 Will Be Divided Among 219 People

Inasmuch as hundreds of new readers are entering the Boston American's $5,000 Famous Titles Test with the appearance today of Test Drawing No. 23, the Test Editor will endeavor to explain briefly what it is all about.

The Famous Titles Test is a sixty-day contest. You have been provided with the first twenty-two drawings. This is the twenty-third day. The picture, you observe, is No. 23.

You are to find a title for this picture in the List of Titles printed on this page. One title in this list fits today's p. ture BETTER than any other title in the list. That title is the Correct Title. This will be true every day.

$5,000 IN CASH AWARDS.

The Boston American is going to pay $5,000 in cash to the 219 readers who succeed in finding the largest numbers of Correct Titles. You are not to send in the pictures before the Test is ended with the printing of Test Drawing No. 60. These are the awards

First Award	$1,000
Second Award	750
Third Award	500
Fourth Award	400
Fifth Award	300
Sixth Award	200
Seventh Award	150
Eighth Award	100
Ninth Award	50
100 Awards of $10 Each	1,000
110 Awards of $5 Each	550
Total	$5,000

Please do not expect that every problem in the Test will be an "easy" one. Some are easy, some not quite so easy, none a bit difficult, and some a little more so. This IS a contest. The artist will do his best to lead you a merry chase before we are out of the woods.

But a title comes to you quickly, is an obvious fit, cannot possibly be disputed, grab it and be happy. Never dismiss a title because it is "too easy."

IT'S CLEAN FUN.

It is not necessary for you to know whether the titles are the titles of books, poems or plays. The artist did not ask. Certain TITLES were placed before him. (Not books, not poems; not plays, only titles.) He was asked to give us 60 drawings, illustrating or representing a selected lot of TITLES. All he attempts to do is picture the one, two, three or more words of a TITLE.

You are certain to enjoy the Famous Titles Test. It is clean, wholesome, helpful fun. The readers' definition of fun will be paid for your efforts, several in substantial amounts. ALL will be given a good time.

Every contestant, new and old, should read the rules. At least one copy of the rules should be preserved with your pictures. The rules will not be printed every day.

Mr. Test Editor:

I am giving every one of your pictures an hour's time every night and I have every one of them as nearly correct as I can get them. Was it necessary for me to send in the coupon before March 1 as a contestant or am I out of it? I shall look in your column of letters and answers for a reply. J. F.

East Weymouth.

It was NOT necessary to send in your name. You are taking part in the Test. Keep right on. The only notice we expect from anyone is the receipt of his set of answers at the close of the Test. Does it really take an hour every evening?

SAVE THE PICTURES.

Dear Sir:

I am interested in the Famous Titles Test and have all the pictures which have been printed. As I did not send in my name before the contest began I do not know if I have a right to take part. V. G. N.

Boston.

Every right in the world! Glad to have you with us! Only new contestants are joining us today. Registration or enrolment is not necessary. Cut and save the pictures until the close of the Test.

Dear Sir:

One title is supposed to fit a picture better than any other, in today's (March 20) list there are two titles which fit the picture, in my way of looking at it. Those titles are "War" and "Europe."

R. H. S.

Dover.

One title in that list fits Test Drawing No. 17 BETTER than any other title in the list.

Dear Sir:

Please answer the following question: Is it true that only one prize is allowed in the same family. What is meant by "family"? My married brother lives in Chelsea and he is in the contest as well as I. Are we looked upon as separate families or just how do you look at it?

Lynn. J. C.

More attention is given to that rule than to all the other rules combined. Prizes are only 219 cash awards and, there being thousands of contestants, it was decided that "not more than one award shall be given in any one family." This is to prevent there being a great degree upon dictionary definit-ons the meaning of the word "family" in the rule may be said to be the meaning given to the word by the dictionary.

ALL MAY COMPETE.

All members of a family may take part in the Test and each may send in as many answers as he wishes. Suppose two members of the family "finish" in the money. In that case, the higher award will be paid promptly. There have been only two or three instances of the kind.

Test Editor:—

"A" says one member of the family is obliged to have an original picture and other members of the family may make copies of it on tracing paper. "B" says even the neighbors may make copies of the picture in his paper. Which is right?

Boston A-B.

Please read the rules. DO NOT use carbon.

Tomorrow, Test Drawing No. 24.

Rules of the Titles Test

The Boston American Famous Titles Test is a test of skill and judgement open to all readers of the Boston American, excepting those of ages, living in any city or town in the Metropolitan District.

One hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given to the newspaper's readers who submit the largest percentages of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published on each day for sixty days beginning with the publication in the Boston American of the first picture.

The employees of the Boston American or their families are not eligible to participating in the awards.

The first prize, consist of sixty pictures, each representing a famous title, a total of sixty, will be given to the person having the best picture on Wednesday, March 29, 1922.

Participating in any other contest with this one for which a fee is charged, or with any one which is not free from all connection or advance expense with entering this contest, will debar a person from participating in this contest. Editors will submit as a set of pictures but each set must contain only one TITLE for each picture. Only the participant shall be entitled to more than one award and no award shall be given to any one family or household.

Each set must be signed in writing, and the name, address, etc., of the participant as he or she wishes it.

No award may give title to "story" form, that is, do not write titles under one assumption of a piece of poetry.

In case there are two contestants who correctly name the largest number of titles, the one who submits the correct answers, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie award will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact compliance with rules. Decision to be decided in that way the tied participants will receive duplicate awards.

Duplicate awards will be made to persons tied in their titles before the end of the Test, as well. Only the first set received is printed will not be considered. KEEP the sets of titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in. Do not send in sets daily.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first set of titles after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles sent in to the Boston American Titles headquarters, at No. 30 Boston street, Dorchester, Mass., within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be plainly addressed to Famous Titles Test, Boston American, 30 Boston street, Boston 25, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible from day to day in the Boston American. It participants desire personal replies they must enclose stamped and self-addressed envelopes.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any changes in addition to those conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly conducting the contest. The final and official decision of the Boston American Test Editor will be accepted by all as such and will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant in the contest shall constitute an acceptance of and regulations now made or to be made.

WORLD MUST AID RUSSIA TO SAVE EUROPE

"The world today has a choice between feeding the starving population of Russia and getting the Russians back on their feet, economically, or submitting to the economic breakdown of the whole of European civilization. It is no more purely a Russian affair than the war was a purely Russian affair," declared Captain Paxton Hibben, recently returned from Russia and the famine district of the Volga, before a large audience at the Grand Opera House.

The meeting was under the auspices of the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children.

"Edward A. Filene of Boston has summarized the European situation up better than any man I know," Captain Hibben continued. "His description of the economic breakdown in the Central European states and Rumania that has followed the war goes to the point.

"Bolshevism has nothing to do with it.

Aimed at Heart of Bay State Insurance Law

Bill, Already Killed in Senate, Should Not Be Allowed to Pass on Reconsideration Today

Fred S. Elwell is a life insurance expert who is a thorn in the flesh of those life insurance companies that are constantly scheming to overreach the interests of their policyholders by sneaking under or over or around the law, which is intended to protect policyholders.

Mr. Elwell, in the course of his volunteer duty, tells us that Senate Bill No. 283, if it becomes a law, will allow a life insurance company to use practically all of the first premium paid by the policyholder for his life insurance protection. In other words, that it will allow part of the first premium, which, under the policy of our laws, should be credited to the policyholder on his reserve account, to be used by life insurance companies for their own purposes and never to be returned to the policyholder or to his family.

Mr. Elwell declares that this bill is aimed straight at the very vitals of the best life insurance law known in the world —the life insurance law of Massachusetts.

This bill has already been killed in the Senate on a roll-call by a vote of 24 to 12. Senator McLane of Fall River, however, who may not know the character of this bill, has asked for a reconsideration of the vote. The vote will come up on reconsideration today.

We hope that the Senate will be in full attendance and on the qui vive when the vote is taken.

O'Brien and Saltonstall

Insulting Comparison of the Two District Attorneys by the Harvard Alumni Bulletin

Our attention has been called to a statement in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin in the issue of March 16. It is in an editorial discussing the appointment of E. P. Saltonstall and T. C. O'Brien for the office of district attorney for Middlesex and Suffolk counties. After a dissertation upon Mr. Saltonstall's ancient family, which probably goes back to Adam and Eve, while O'Brien's stops a good many million years sooner, the Bulletin says:

> Saltonstall, now one of the leaders of the bar, made a great financial sacrifice when, contrary to his own desires and from a sense of public duty, he accepted the appointment from Governor Cox. O'Brien, possessing a sense of public duty no less than Saltonstall's, was, doubtless, glad to receive the salary of the district attorney of Suffolk County.

So far as we know, Mr. Saltonstall is a he-man and we presume, therefore, that if he has read this nauseating stuff about himself, he felt when he read it as if he were taking an emetic.

We ought to say that evidently there was no intention by the author of the article to insult District Attorney O'Brien, in whom, as a graduate of Harvard, the author took some pride. But the flunky who wrote this editorial probably did not know that he had made an insulting comparison. He probably wears a monocle; favors the Four-Party Treaty pact; thinks that the British should be forgiven their debts to us and should be allowed to protect us against the wicked nations of the world; would suppress the Declaration of Independence, because it recites British atrocities against us; would alter the history of the revolution, because the British do not like it, and would also reverse the results of the revolution.

They have a lot of such creatures at Harvard, don't you know!

As to the idea that our alleged aristocrats have to be, dragged into public office by oxen and chains, we want to assure a gullible public that it is a myth. Our alleged aristocrats get into public office by virtue of pulling and hauling such as would make an alleged plebeian blush with shame.

We do not say that Mr. Saltonstall pulled and hauled to get into his office, but the idea that he was dragged in at great personal sacrifice and very much against his wish must make even Mr. Saltonstall himself smile.

Lloyd George's Brain

He Uses It

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Lloyd George, in spite of protest, is determined that both Russia and Germany shall meet with the other nations at Genoa.

It is not that he loves the Russian kind of government, or that he has forgiven all the worry that Germany caused him, when the whole load of the British Empire rested on his shoulders.

It is that Lloyd George has a brain and uses it. He demands "united Europe"—says that as long as it is lacking the war is not over and nothing is safe.

It is a fortunate thing for Europe and the world in general that the most powerful man in the world just now is the Welshman, Lloyd George. If the white race retains its supremacy and its civilization in Europe, it will have Lloyd George to thank for it.

The Ladies of Des Lacs

They Won

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

The town of Des Lacs, North Dakota, took as its election day motto, "Bigger, better and cleaner Des Lacs."

And, lo and behold! every single official elected was a woman. The president of the town, the trustees, the treasurer, the marshal and the justice of the peace are all ladies. Good suffragettes that hope for miracles will be disappointed. Des Lacs will still be Des Lacs.

Foolish men that think women unfit to hold office will also be disappointed. Women are just about as capable as men, perhaps a little more so in town government, which is really a kind of housekeeping.

The importance of woman suffrage is not in the superior ability of women, but rather in their better moral character, and in the fact that, when WOMEN vote, MEN are compelled to ask themselves "What do the women want?" in order to hold their jobs.

Wife's Right to Independence

LONDON, March 27.—A well-known student of home conditions discussed the recent agitation regarding a "wife's right to be independent."

"The problem of the penniless wife, which was recently raised," says this authority, "calls up the equally interesting case of the wife whose lot it was before marriage to be economically independent. She is, it is true, not so common a type, but each year sees an increase in her numbers.

"It is obvious that even if she continues her work in a profession, on the stage or in the office, after her marriage she will not any longer have full independence, although she is economically her own mistress. Nor, surely, can she expect entirely to be free. Very few women are capable of being intrusted with absolute freedom, nor do many desire it.

"Marriage is a bond, and can never be a happy relationship unless each party to the contract is prepared to sacrifice a good deal of personal liberty. A wife's ultimate sphere is, and always must be, her own home. Every girl should recognize this before marriage.

"A shrewd husband will realize that his wife adds to her self-respect by being an efficient wage-earner, and will be prepared to give her at least a proportionate part of her previous earnings as 'housewife's salary' if he requires her to discontinue her professional duties in order to look after his home.

"Few men are sufficiently wise enough to give their wives free enough to make them feel as much mistresses of their own affairs as they were before marriage, but it is only by such methods that 'the twelve-pound look' can be banished from a wife's eyes."

A controversy has been raised over the question whether "the first hundred years are the longest" or "the first hundred years are the hardest." We hazard the opinion that the first hundred years are the most plausible.

GOLD STANDARD BLAMED FOR CONFUSION OF MONEYS

PARIS, March 27.—The theory that gold should be removed as a money basis has found a powerful backer in the person of Joseph Caillaux, former Premier of France, and admittedly one of the world's greatest economists.

"The most urgent problem confronting the world today is the ending of the present grotesque confusion of moneys," states Caillaux in his book. "The sole solution is the creation of a European banknote, based not on gold, but on credits and international securities.

"The gold standard was faulty in its inception, and it has remained as long as it has solely because the great catastrophe proving it fallacious was long in coming. But the war has shown that a system by which a floating gold supply can govern the richness or poverty of far-separated nations is a system not only fundamentally unjust, but one which in the end wreaks vengeance on its supposed beneficiaries.

"How explain the paradox that, while the French government is one of the poorest in the world, the French nation is one of the wealthiest—if not the wealthiest, per capita? How explain that, in a country where almost every man has a modest bank account, the government cannot pay its debts?

"The answer is that the system of basing a nation's credit on the amount of base metal resting in its banks is not a true criterion of that nation's wealth."

Although, under decision of the High Court, Caillaux is forbidden to live in Paris for five years and has lost his rights as citizen in perpetuity, the former Premier states he is determined to "fight assiduously and with all my strength that my country may regain its former unshakable financial standing." To this end he has written and published a book, declared to be one of the most masterly analyses of economic conditions ever penned, called, "Where Is France Going? Where Is Europe Heading?"

Included in the book is a powerful appeal that France and the remainder of Europe enter immediately into commercial relation with Russia.

"Without Russia, Europe is slowly slipping into the miasma of ruin," he declared. "Bankruptcy of the majority of European states cannot be avoided, but at least we can avoid the aftermath of misery which would otherwise be inevitable by preparing now to re-cement the commercial organization of Europe, so that when the crash comes we may emerge to find a solid foundation for the new economic structure all ready."

ONCE OVERS

DO YOU EXPECT PERFECTION IN YOUR PARTNER?

When a husband or a wife expects a flawless partner, someone is due to get a shock—none is perfect.

Every person has one or more peculiarities.

Few persons but have several traits disagreeable to others.

When a woman gets dissatisfied with her husband because of some faults which she thinks he possesses, she may feel that she knows of some other man who would not do or be like her erring husband.

But she may not know that her own husband has many admirable qualities which the man she thinks so perfect in comparison does not possess.

A man in comparing his wife with other women many times may see ways wherein she does not measure up to someone he has in mind, but the chances are that if he is fair, he will find that she is far superior to the one with whom he compares her.

Husbands and wives should realize that no matter how perfect imagination may picture, reality does not discover one who perfects in all things.

There would be fewer divorces if persons made greater effort to be pleasing to the husband or the wife, and that ought to be rather easy since the only one whose opinion really matters is the husband or the wife, as the case may be.

Somebody's Birthday

Copyright, 1922, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

IF born today you should find yourself well equipped at the outset of your journey through life. You have naturally an enviable strength of mind as well as of character.

You are ambitious and conscientious in an undertaking which gives your talents a dramatic chance of displaying themselves to their best advantage.

But there is one serious fault in your character, which, unless you correct it with more determination than you are accustomed to use in your everyday life, will seriously impair your personal efficiency.

You should learn to apply the talent for investigation which is latent in your character and find the interesting facts and relations in whatever you have to do.

You are given to rather serious melancholy at times, but never so serious as you yourself imagine and if the truth were known almost enjoyable. Your birthday brings probable change, but any matters arranged today will culminate favorably.

Your ensuing year will be a peaceful one. Matters which have been causing you distress will right themselves with little effort and your year will end prosperously.

A child born today will be beset with many difficulties owing to its enquiring nature, but depend upon it will always come up smiling.

DANGER IN MARRIAGE MADE IN HASTE

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

SHE'S in love, madly, desperately, hopelessly in love—poor little, eager little, innocent little, trusting little Nineteen.

And the man she loves isn't as clever as she is, or as good.

He doesn't belong to the same set to which her brother belongs. She didn't meet him at the house of a friend. She met him at a Summer resort, and she doesn't know any of the people he knows or read any of the books he reads or think any of the thoughts he thinks, except one.

And that is how cruel and unreasonable and cold and mercenary her father is, because he won't say "yes" to the marriage.

Such a Knowing Gleam

Father is a widower and Nineteen is the core of his heart.

He could have married again and a good many times, since Nineteen's mother died—but he had a stepmother himself and he was a little afraid—and so he stayed lonely for years. And he sent Nineteen to the very best of schools, and toward June the fellows in the office always noticed that C. D., as they called him, began to smile very easily, and he was always whistling.

And there were parties at the old house—dances and fudge parties and mandolin musicales, and C. D. tried so hard not to be in the way. And he was so anxious that Nineteen shouldn't miss her mother too much. And he had his widowed sister come and look out for Nineteen.

But then came the Summer resort and The Man.

Such an old, young man, with such a knowledge gleam in his eye—and such strange, touchy ways and such queer ideas.

But he could dance like an entertainer, he could play the mandolin and the guitar and the banjo, and he knew all the very latest songs—and the girls were crazy about him. There was one girl in particular—a little thing with red hair and great big violet eyes. She really made a fool of herself over The Man.

Poor Little Nineteen

But The Man seemed to like Nineteen from the very first—and every one was surprised, for Nineteen was a quiet little thing, not at all the sort that The Man seemed to fancy.

It couldn't have been because she was an only child and her father is a rich man, could it?

Anyhow C. D. is broken-hearted. All his plans and all his hopes are gone.

He positively hates The Man—and The Man openly laughs at C. D. And poor little Nineteen—she's beginning to laugh at C. D., too, or she did at first, and now she thinks he's a cold-hearted, cruel, tyrannical father.

I suppose she'll run away with The Man and marry him, and Father will forgive them—and they'll all go and live together in the big house, with the trees C. D. and his little young wife planted together, whispering in at the window.

I wonder how long they'll live there—and how long it will take little Nineteen to see that her father was not selfish at all, when he refused to let her marry The Man. He was just trying to take care of her—that's all.

Poor little Nineteen—what a pity she won't let her father help her!

What a pity she can't learn any way except in the bitter school of Experience!

Well, well—I suppose that's what we're here for, after all.

Letter to the Editor

Better to Prevent Crime

Editor Boston American:

A movement was recently inaugurated by a United States Senator to show the need of and to arouse interest in a prison for the State of Massachusetts. In a newspaper article was set forth the unsanitary and uncomfortable conditions under which the prisoners live.

We are working from the wrong end when we direct our attention and give our money for the purpose of making the man comfortable who is already in prison. It is true that favorable living quarters are conducive to reform, but in the end it would be much more beneficial to society in general if we tried to get at the root of the matter and spent this time, energy and money in trying to prevent the causes which finally find the individual in jail.

Adequate pensions for widows, raising the age at which children may leave school, better housing conditions, and perhaps more important than all, regulating the marriage of those who are mentally and physically defective are the great means by which crime can be lessened and society be brought to a safe and sane basis.

REBECCA MOSKOWITZ.

WHO ELSE IS GLAD YOU WERE BORN?

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

THIS is my birthday; not the day on which you, my kind reader, are seeing this article, but the day on which I write it. For once I claim the privilege of speaking with you in my own proper person, the first person singular.

Today I am particularly important—though not quite so important to myself, my Mother and the world, as—let me see, how many years ago?

Not that I resent the decent modesty of the impersonal third person wherewith I usually refer to myself in these articles as "the present writer." Nor do I deem it a fair compensation for the unflattering knowledge of my unimportance, when occasionally I flatter myself with an editorial "we."

However, today I am I! As on that first day that I arrived and, without apology but, on the contrary, with trumpeting self-assertion, I cried aloud my self-announcement: "Here I am!"

A monetary sense of self-importance today prompted me to address myself as a newly-born to all others who were born. I presume, dear reader, that this includes YOU.

The question that I wanted to ask you all is just this: "Who else is glad that you were born?"

With a Smile

If you are Yankee enough to turn the query back upon me, I am ready with a frank reply. I have not kept a list of those who have shown a varied pleasure in my existence. But I do know that I face the world with a smile, my thoughts and my words habitually are kind, and I try to radiate good will.

Beyond this, it is not necessary that I should be autobiographical. I recognise your right to ask yourself or me whether I practice what I "preach." But your main interest in this query really attaches to your own answer.

Every day you are born anew, when you come back to earth as it were from the womb of Sleep and out of the cloudland of dreams.

When you awake, it is fitting always to be grateful for finding yourself alive and face to face with another day and its endless opportunities for self-improvement, service, happiness, and especially for spreading the beneficent contagion of a sweet, strong and helpful personality.

That brings us once more to the question: Who else is glad that you were born?

If you are a grouch at home, be sure that, however much your family may love you and however deep may be their devotion to you, your presence does not actually make them happy.

You may get love and devotion. These are often habitual. But joy is spontaneous or voluntary.

It is pleasanter to contemplate the type of person who is, in all contacts, at home and abroad, with seeming inferiors and supposed superiors, with beneficiaries and benefactors, always the same, always the lover, meeting all persons with a friendly countenance.

Genuinely Human

That kind of being is genuinely human, a perpetual benediction. Such a one radiates goodwill and makes every one glad that he was born.

Probably he is neither modest nor immodest, but properly self-respecting. He is aware of his spiritual worth, because he knows his own motives and that his supreme motive is love.

Suppose, then, you ask yourself the double question of this essay: Whether you are happy to be alive; and who else is glad that you were born. And do not try to deceive yourself in your answer to either.

It is easily possible that, though you do not wish to die, you are not particularly gleeful about finding yourself an earthly resident. Probably no one but yourself can cure you of soul-sickness.

Certainly, no one can argue you out of such a condition. Perhaps you are only physically out of order. For the old pun is always newly true, which says, in answer to the academic conundrum: Is life worth living?—that it all depends upon the liver. Or the lungs, or the nerves, or what not.

Figuratively, it depends upon your heart and your brain. It depends upon your health of mind and spirit. And that, early and late, is in your own power to create within you.

Do not wait for your calendar birthday. Ask yourself today the doubleheader query. If you are reasonably happy that you are alive—or can win yourself for that cheerful view—you will make others also glad that you were born.
